 8 8 Re -SUBMISSION

9 10 THIS SUBMISSION IS PROVIDED FOR PUBLICATION AS IDENTITIES RELATING 11 TO CONFIDENTIAL MATTERS HAVE NOT BEEN REVEALED.

12 13 Commissioner,

14 15 this submission is extensive as it related to Lawyer X and a lot more that I view is relevant. I do view however that from my experiences of nearly 4 decades at the bar table Lawyer X case cannot be considered in isolation but must be considered in the overall as the courts (administration of justice) as well as law enforcement authorities operate.
 16 17 This submission is also in part to set out the extend of the misuse and abuse of the administration of justice by the judges themselves which I view is must responsible for the misuse and abuse of lawyers to be involved as informers contrary to their positions as an Officer of the Court.

18 22 From onset I may state I am pleased that the commissioner, so I understand from reports in the media made clear that the Royal commission is not to set aside any convictions. After all the Royal Commission is as I view it a political tool by the government limited to the terms of references provided for in the Letters Patent and as such cannot even investigate other relevant matters albeit can consider them.

23 28 For example it much goes to the issue of the CREDIBILITY OF THE WITNESS if a witness appearing before the Royal Commission or providing any kind of evidence otherwise is a credible witness.

24 32 The following is a clear warning that using the accused as to provide details against himself, via an informant Officer of the Court who represents the accused clearly violated accusatorial system of justice. The prosecutor/police deliberate conduct persisted with over decades cannot be excused, and all those involved should be prosecutor for this.

33 37 QUOTE FROM AUTHORITY BELOW

34 38 This is because the fairness of a trial can be tested by its conformity with those principles underlying the accusatorial system of justice ..A fair trial is a public hearing in which the Crown makes a specific allegation, for which the accused has never before been convicted or acquitted, that the accused has violated a pre-existing rule of law, during which trial the Crown bears the burden of establishing that allegation with evidence before an independent and neutral trier of law and fact, without compelling the accused in any way to participate in establishing the allegation against him until a case to meet has been established, and in which the

17 Whereas the High Court of Australia as I understand it specifically stated that EF/Informer
18 3838/Lawyer X refused to use police protection and indicated that the authorities may have to 19 consider the safety of the children then on that basis it is reasonable to assume that EF/Informer
20 3838/Lawyer X is not the same person as Ms Gobbo, this even so both might have been involved
21 as informers. Indeed, the Victorian Police by now seemingly admitted that there were more 22 lawyers as informers then

28 Lawyer Nicola Gobbo settles legal action against police, government
29 Kate Jones and Padraic Murphy, HeraldSun
30 September 25, 2010 12:00am
31 HIGH-profile barrister Nicola Gobbo has settled her court case against Victoria Police and 32 the State of Victoria.
33 Ms Gobbo's claim for damages was formally dismissed in the Supreme Court yesterday 34 after the matter was settled out of court.
35 Ms Gobbo, 38, said yesterday she could not comment because of a confidentiality
36 agreement and health concerns.
37 "I'm unable to comment on the terms of settlement due to confidentiality provisions," she 38 said. "However I look forward to commenting in so far as I am able to once my health is 39 restored."
40 Ms Gobbo was a key witness against former detective Paul Dale, who was charged with 41 murdering police informer Terence Hodson.
42 Mr Hodson and his wife Christine were shot dead in their Kew East home in 2004.

1 Charges against Mr Dale and another man, who cannot be named, were dropped by the 2 Office of Public Prosecutions in June due to insufficient evidence.

3 Ms Gobbo was a prosecution witness against Mr Dale and wore a recording device to tape
4 a conversation she had with him in December 2008.

5 In a writ lodged in the Supreme Court in April, she said the stress of being a key witness in 6 the case had caused her to fear for her life and exacerbated health problems stemming from 7 a stroke she suffered in 2004.

8 Ms Gobbo claims she travelled around Australia under an assumed name and was moved 9 to 14 locations.

10 She alleged police had breached their agreement and had not provided appropriate support.

11 Reports suggested Ms Gobbo had sought millions in compensation.

12 A spokeswoman for Victoria Police said the terms of the settlement would remain 13 confidential.

14 "Victoria Police can confirm it has settled matters in relation to Ms Gobbo," she said.
15 "Victoria Police will be making no further comment."

21 It is my understanding that Chief Commission Graham Ashton made false misleading statements
22 regarding why EF/Informant 38438/Lawyer X became an informer in 2005. She herself also I 23 view made false/misleading statements.

25 The Office of Public Prosecutions and the Government Solicitors Office I understand were 26 involved to conceal this rot of EF/Informant 38438/Lawyer X and others like her from the 27 courts. And those are now who somehow exonerate the Red shit persons who I view defrauded 28 Consolidated Revenue Funds? Come on. How can anyone trust any of those people who 29 willingly were perverting the course of justice?

30 Let it be clear that this gangland murders never really stopped because the police and others were 31 in my view [REDACTED]

32 [REDACTED]

33 [REDACTED]

34 According to the Herald Sun February 16 NEWS 07 in an article about Lawyer X and Tony 35 Mokbel it states:

36 QUOTE

37 "EF (Lawyer X), when speaking to her handlers, said of Mokbel: 'Well, one of the 38 many ironies of all this is I have so many conflicts with the bloke but what does he 39 know? He doesn't know about any of them They'll stay hidden'."

40 END QUOTE

42 It is reasonable to expect she did the same with other clients, as Carl Williams seemed to 43 underline.

45 What kind of credibility would the Victorian Police have where not just one but for decades they 46 went along to pervert the course of justice by unlawfully/unethically using Officers of the Courts 47 as informants in violation to what they had to do for their clients?

48

49 In my view those police officers, lawyers of the Solicitors Office/DPP, etc, [REDACTED]

50

1 As this SUBMISSION sets out I filed formal complaints with the DPP and others regarding the 2 Red shirt issue and it is the same DPP that allegedly exonerate the persons involved despite my 3 complaint not being completed.

4
 5 It then begs to ask will the Royal Commission follow suit and turn this into some WHITE
 6 ELIPHANT where the very people who perverted the course of justice will in the end not be 7 recommended for charges?

8
 9 I am no friend of any drug dealer/pusher and when i some decades ago suspected [REDACTED]
 10 [REDACTED] I so to say read him so to say the riot act that he better not involve
 11 any of [REDACTED]. To his credit he never did so. However, I do not accept that a person
 12 suspected of being a drug dealer can be convicted by having his lawyer being a police informer 13 in violation of her being an Officer of the Court. In my view the courts themselves should have 14 immediately set aside all convictions involving those kind of informers and leave it to the 15 authorities to try to pursue the alleged offenders by a FAIR and PROPER trial and the prosecutor 16 to prove the evidence is not tainted and is admissible.

 18 In my view as long as the courts fails to set aside each and every questionable conviction
 19 involving such kind of an informer then the Court are accepting that its Officers of the Court can 20 violate their obligations/duties, etc, and as such place its own credibility in disrepute.

 22 It in my view would be lunacy and total idiotic if because some informer may have a child or 23 children then the legal consequences are somehow not to be pursued. We have this equality 24 movement and well let all people be equal also in how they are pursued for offences and 25 sentenced.

 27 We cannot have our democracy undermined by those kind of traitors to our constitution. Our 28 governor is to provide for an IMPARTIAL administration of justice and the Supreme Court of 29 Victoria and other courts involved clearly fail to deliver where they place the onus upon those 30 convicted rather than upon its own failure to ensure its officers of the Court are acting 31 honourable and appropriate.

32
 33 It to me is totally irrelevant what Tony Mokbel or whomever may be accused of violating laws
 34 unless they are convicted by a FAIR and PROPER hearing and an IMPARTIAL administration 35 of justice. Clearly the courts themselves failed to provide for this where its own Officers of the 36 Court were undermining the IMPARTIALITY of the administration of justice.

 38 Hansard 1-2-1898 Constitution Convention Debates (Official Record of the Debates of the National 39 Australasian Convention),
 40 QUOTE Mr. O'CONNOR (New South Wales).-

41 Because, as has been said before, it is [start page 357] necessary not only that the administration of 42 justice should be pure and above suspicion, but that it should be beyond the possibility of suspicion;

 45 When any court is willing to let people convicted as result of their lawyers being Officers of the 46 Court having betrayed their positions then the courts themselves are no more within the term of 47 IMPARTIAL administration of justice and I view could be deemed KANGAROO COURTS
 48 and STAR CHAMBER COURTS (OUTLAWED in the 1980 Act Interpretation Act) as the 49 courts cannot command jurisdiction where they themselves are allowing its Officers to pervert 50 the course of justice.

 52 Hansard 1-3-1898 Constitution Convention Debates
 53 QUOTE

1 Mr. HIGGINS.-Suppose the sentry is asleep, or is in the swim with the other power?

2
3 Mr. GORDON.-There will be more than one sentry. In the case of a federal law, every member of a

5 As regards a law passed by a state, every man in the Federal Parliament will be a sentry, and the whole
6 constituency behind the Federal Parliament will be a sentry.

7 END QUOTE

9 Therefore we as citizens must all accept that we have an obligation to hold those who defy the 10 rule of law regardless if they are in high or powerful positions are also prosecutor in a fair and 11 proper manner. We must also protect any accused against a trial by media as then no matter how 12 innocent a person might be a person will be or might be convicted not on evidence but on what 13 the media might purport to be the issues.

16 Australasian Convention)

17 QUOTE Mr. OCONNOR.-

18 So that any citizen of any portion of the Commonwealth would have the guarantee of liberty and safety in 19 regard to the processes of law, and also would have a guarantee of the equal administration of the law as it
20 exists. I think Mr. Isaacs will bear me out, that in the United States it has been decided that the title to equal 21 treatment under the law does not mean that you cannot make a law which differentiates one class of the 22 community from another; but, as has been decided, it means that in the administration of the laws you have 23 made, all the citizens shall be treated equally. And that should be so. Whatever privilege we give to our 24 citizens, the administration of the law should be equal to all, whatever their colour. The case I refer to is 25 one of the Chinese cases-I forget the name of it.

26 END QUOTE

28 What really is absurd is that the courts essentially decide who can or cannot represent a party. I
29 being self-educated in legal issues including constitutional matters assisted/represented parties
30 as a Professional Advocate and not being an Officer of the Court never was by this corrupted to 31 serve the court for unethical or other unlawful conduct. To me this is an important issue as we 32 now have witnessed that regardless that the supreme Court of Victoria in December 2018
33 acknowledged in a judgment (as I understand from media reports) the wrongdoings of 34 EF/Informer 3838/Lawyer X it didn't at all bother to ensure she was held legally accountable for 35 placing the administration of justice in disrepute. After all being an Officer of the Court means 36 she is part of the administration of justice and should therefore have been made an example that 37 her conduct is unacceptable.

39
40
41
42
45 We should never set up a deceptive administration of justice where the accused should prove his 46 innocence and/or having been denied a FAIR and PROPER trial as the onus lies upon the Court
47 to ensure any accused is provided with a FAIR and PROPER trial and the moment the court 48 becomes aware that this might not have eventuated the duty lies upon the courts and not the 49 accused to make this public and the court MUST set aside any such conviction.

 8 How on earth can we expect a person murdered in prison such as Carl Williams to petition the 9 courts to set aside questionable convictions?

10 Any judge who presides over a trial under the colour of administration of justice but finds 11 afterwards this was not or not likely provided must then upon his/her own initiative set aside 12 the judgments being it for fraud or otherwise.

 39 QUOTE

40 "The Rule against Bias. A true judicial decision can be reached only if the judge himself 41 is impartial. This is an obvious requirement in a court of law or a tribunal. In R. v Rand
 42 (1866) it was held that a judge is disqualified where (i) he has a direct pecuniary interest, 43 however small, in the subject-matter in dispute; or (ii) there is real likelihood that the judge 44 would have a bias in favour of one of the parties.

45
 46 For example, if a judge is related to, or is a friend of, one of the parties to a dispute there
 47 would be real likelihood of bias. It is immaterial whether a judicial decision was in fact
 48 biased, for as was said by Lord Chief Justice Heward in R. v Sussex Justices, ex parte McCarthy (1924): 'Justice should not only be done, but should manifestly and undoubtedly 49 be seen to be done.'

50
 51 As an example of pecuniary bias we may quote:

1
2 Dimes v. Grand Junction Canal (1852). Lord Chancellor Cottenham made decrees in a
3 Chancery suit in favour of a canal company. Lord Cottenham held several shares in the 4 company. Held: (by the House of Lords): that the decrees be set aside on the ground of 5 pecuniary interest. No bias was proved in fact, nor could it be shown that Lord Cottenham
6 was in any way influenced by his shareholding.
7

8 As an example of likelihood of bias we may quote:
9

10 R. v Sussex Justices, ex parte McCarthy (1924). A was summoned before magistrates for 11 a motoring offence. The acting clerk to the justices was a member of a firm of solicitors
12 representing A in civil proceedings arising out of the same accident. The acting clerk did 13 not advise the magistrates, but he retired with them to consider their decision. Held: that as 14 the acting clerk was connected with the case in the civil action he ought not to advise the 15 magistrates in the criminal prosecution. Conviction accordingly quashed, despite the fact 16 that the acting clerk took no part in the decision to convict and had not been asked by the 17 justices to give his opinion or advice. "

20 It is clear that where an Officer of the Court acted in violation of her/his client then this is 21 sufficient ground to have the orders set aside.

23 * So far as material to this case s. 79A (1) of the Family Law Act 1975 (Cth) provides that 24 "When, on application by a person affected by an order made by a court under section 79, the 25 court is satisfied that the order was obtained by fraud, by duress, by the giving of false evidence 26 or by the suppression of evidence, the court may, in its discretion, set aside the order . . .".
27 Section 83 provides, inter alia, that "in proceedings with respect to the maintenance of a party to 28 a marriage . . . if there is in force an order with respect to the maintenance of that party . . . the 29 Court may . . . (c) discharge the order. . . ."

33

34 In my view this applies to the police/prosecutor as well as to the lawyers when they conceal 35 relevant details relating to a miscarriage of justice/perverting the course of justice.

38 Regarding that any party to legal proceedings may subpoena any person as a witness.
39 Without the leave of the court. If the Court is satisfied that the process is being abused, the 40 Court has the jurisdiction to set aside the subpoena.

41 See also; McKinley v. McKinley [1960] 1 W.L.R. 120

42 In this case an unnecessary subpoena was set aside, however an application to set aside the 43 subpoena may be refused, when the grounds of the application is privileged, which the 44 witness may claim after he has attended in pursuance of the subpoena.

12 In my opinion, the words 'false evidence' in s79A(1) do not mean evidence which is 13 wilfully false. The sub-section should be read according to its terms. To say that 'false 14 evidence should be read as 'wilful false evidence' is to introduce a provision not 15 expressed by the provision; cf s6H of the Royal Commission Act 1902 which speaks of a 16 witness 'who knowingly gives false testimony'. This interpretation is reinforced by 17 reference elsewhere in s79A(1) to the separate grounds of fraud and suppression of 18 evidence which would comprehend cases of wilful false evidence. At common law, a 19 judgment will be set aside if it has been obtained by fraud. In the exercise of this 20 jurisdiction, it has been held that an applicant must show something more than perjury, 21 ie. new facts (Baker v. Wadsworth [1898] 67 LJQB 301; Everett V. Ribbands [1946] 175

1 QUOTE IN THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW SOUTH WALES CRIMINAL DIVISION, NO 70007 of 1991, R -v- CHEUNG

2 RELEVANT LAW: JAGO v. THE DISTRICT COURT

3 Jago was a case in which a stay was sought because of the long delay between the offences and 4 the charges, and between the laying of charges and the trial. The stay was refused by the trial
 5 judge and his decision was upheld by the Court of Appeal and by the High Court. The High
 6 Court held, in effect, that proceedings may be stayed where the right to a fair trial is so
 7 much impaired that the further prosecution of the proceedings will be an abuse of process.
 8 In the words of Mason, CJ.:

9 "The continuation of process which will culminate in an unfair trial can be seen as a 10 misuse of the court process which will constitute an abuse of process because the public 11 interest in holding a trial does not warrant the holding of an unfair trial."

12 The Chief Justice pointed out that the appropriate remedy for unfairness, specifically because of 13 undue delay but not limited to that, was not necessarily a stay of the proceedings.

14 "There is no reason to confine the discretionary power of the courts by arbitrarily 15 stipulating that a stay is the only proper remedy for undue delay."

16 Mason, CJ. went on to make a second and related point:

17 "In appropriate cases, orders may be made to prevent injustice notwithstanding that there
 18 is no reason to suspect that the actual trial, when held, will not be fair. Thus orders may 19 be directed to ensuring fairness in pre-trial procedures."

20 His Honour instanced an order for expedition where delay was becoming prejudicial. His 21 Honour gave other instances of orders which might be made, short of a permanent stay, to meet 22 the exigencies of the particular case - the grant of a limited or conditional stay, or the making of 23 an order that a proceedings be stayed and not proceeded with further without specific order of 24 the court.

25 There are two other important points which emerge from the judgment of Mason, CJ. in Jago.
 26 First, the power to grant a stay or to make any other order to prevent the use of court processes in 27 a manner which gives rise to injustice is discretionary, to be exercised in a principled way.
 28 Second, the power will be used only in most exceptional circumstances to order that a criminal 29 prosecution be stayed. The touchstone for the exercise of discretion is in every case fairness. As 30 to that, Mason, CJ. said:

31 "The test of fairness which must be applied involves a balancing process, for the interests 32 of the accused cannot be considered in isolation without regard to the community's right to 33 expect that persons charged with criminal offences are brought to trial. ... At the same time
 34 it should not be overlooked that the community expects trials to be fair and to take place
 35 within a reasonable time after a person has been charged."

36 It was his Honour's view that:

37 "A permanent stay should be ordered only in an extreme case and the making of such an 38 order on the basis of delay alone will accordingly be very rare." (p.34).

39 Speaking more generally, rather than in the context of delay alone, his Honour said:

40 "To justify a permanent stay of criminal proceedings, there must be a fundamental 41 defect which goes to the root of the trial 'of such a nature that nothing that a trial
 42 judge can do in the conduct of the trial can relieve against its unfair consequences':
 43 Barton (1980) 147 CLR at 111 per Wilson, J."

44 Brennan, J. maintained the distinction between a power to prevent an abuse of process and a
 45 power to ensure a fair trial. His Honour said:-\

1 "A power to ensure a fair trial is not a power to stop a trial before it starts. It is a power to 2 mould the procedures of the trial to avoid or minimize prejudice to either party."

3 His Honour pointed out that obstacles in the way of a fair trial are often encountered in 4 administering criminal justice, but do not ordinarily cause the proceedings to be permanently 5 stayed:

6 "Unfairness occasioned by circumstances outside the court's control does not make 7 the trial a source of unfairness. When an obstacle to a fair trial is encountered, the 8 responsibility cast on a trial judge to avoid unfairness to either party but particularly to 9 the accused is burdensome, but the responsibility is not discharged by refusing to 10 exercise the jurisdiction to hear and to determine the issues. The responsibility is 11 discharged by controlling the procedures of the trial by adjournments or other 12 interlocutory orders, by rulings on evidence and, especially, by directions to the jury 13 designed to counteract any prejudice which the accused might suffer."

14 On the other hand:-

15 "More radical remedies may be needed to prevent an abuse of process. An abuse of 16 process occurs when the process of the law is put in motion for a purpose which in the 17 eye of the law it is not intended to serve or when the process is incapable of serving the 18 purpose it is intended to serve. The purpose of criminal proceedings generally speaking 19 is to hear and determine finally whether the accused has engaged in conduct which 20 amounts to an offence and, on that account, is deserving of punishment. When criminal 21 process is used only for that purpose and is capable of serving that purpose, there is no 22 abuse of process. Although it is not possible to state exhaustively all the categories of 23 abuse of process, it will generally be found in the use of criminal process inconsistently
 24 with some aspect of its true purpose. ... When process is abused, the unfairness against 25 which a litigant is entitled to protection is his subjection to process which is not intended
 26 to serve or which is not capable of serving its true purpose. But it cannot be said that a 27 trial is not capable of serving its true purpose when some unfairness has been 28 occasioned by circumstances outside the court's control unless it be said that an 29 accused person's liability to conviction is discharged by such unfairness. ..."

30 Brennan, J. pointed out that:

31 "When serious delay is attributable to the prosecution and an accused has been prejudiced 32 thereby, the courts are tempted to offer the remedy of a permanent stay. ..."

33 "It avoids the possibility that a person may be convicted after a trial and which he 34 may suffer some prejudice in his defence."

35 His Honour emphasized, however, that:-

36 "However understandable the granting of a permanent stay for delay causing prejudice 37 might be, the remedy cannot be supported unless it would truly be an abuse of 38 process to try the case. In determining what does amount to an abuse of process the 39 considerations which favour the expansion of that notion so that it will support the 40 remedy of permanent stay for delay causing prejudice to an accused must be set against 41 countervailing considerations which have particular force in the criminal jurisdiction.
 42 Before this court sanctions such an expansion of the notion, it is appropriate to consider 43 the need for such a radical discretionary power to refuse to try a criminal case and the 44 effects of vesting such a power in a trial judge."

45 His Honour continued (p.49):-

46 "By the flexible use of the power to control the procedure and by the giving of forthright
 47 directions to a jury, a judge can eliminate or virtually eliminate unfairness. The judge's

1 responsibilities are heavy but that are not discharged by abdication of the court's duty to 2 try the case. If it be said that judicial measures cannot always secure perfect justice to an
 3 accused, we should ask whether the ideal of perfect justice has not sounded in rhetoric
 4 rather than in law and whether the legal right of an accused, truly stated, is a right to a 5 trial as fair as the courts can make it. Were it otherwise, trials would be prevented and 6 convictions would be set aside when circumstances outside judicial control impair
 7 absolute fairness. To take an obvious example, the administration of the criminal law in 8 notorious cases brought to a halt by adverse media publicity. To admit a power to stay a 9 case permanently for delay causing prejudice seems wrongly to undervalue the advocacy 10 of the orders, rulings and directions of a trial judge removing unfairness to an accused 11 caused by delay or other misconduct by the prosecution.

12 Moreover, although our system of litigation adopts the adversary method in both the 13 criminal and civil jurisdiction, interests other than those of the litigants are involved in 14 litigation especially criminal litigation. The community has an immediate interest in the 15 administration of criminal justice to guarantee peace and order in society..."

16 At p.53 his Honour expressed disapproval of cases in this court and other State Supreme Courts 17 where "these courts have asserted that the categories of cases in which the power to grant a 18 permanent stay should be exercised are not closed and the power is available whenever it would 19 be unfair to the accused to permit the prosecution to proceed ... in practice so broad a power does 20 not fall far short of a power which is incompatible with the rule of law".
 21 Deane, J. held that the power of a court to control proceedings before it includes the power to 22 ensure that the court's process is not abused by the proceedings being made an instrument of 23 unfair oppression. The reference commonly made to an accused's right to a fair trial was in his 24 Honour's view not sufficiently precise:

25 "Strictly speaking, however, there is no such directly enforceable right since no person 26 has the right to insist upon being prosecuted or tried by the state. What is involved is 27 more accurately expressed in negative terms as a right not to be tried unfairly or as an 28 immunity against conviction otherwise than after a fair trial."

29 His Honour acknowledged that as a general proposition it can be said: -

30 "That the fault or impropriety on the part of the prosecution in pre trial procedures can, 31 depending on the circumstances, be so prejudicial to an accused that the trial itself is 32 made an unfair one."

33 His Honour proceeded to offer examples:

34 "One example is where particulars supplied to an accused have been so inadequate and 35 misleading that an accused has been denied a proper opportunity of preparing his defence.
 36 Another is where impropriety on the part of the prosecution has concealed from an 37 accused important evidence which would have assisted him in his defence. In each of 38 those examples, the effect of the default or impropriety could ordinarily be dealt with by 39 orders (eg. adjournment, further particulars or new trial) which would avoid unfairness in 40 a subsequent trial or re-trial. It is however possible to formulate examples of cases in 41 which the effect of default or impropriety on the part of the prosecution would 42 necessarily be that any subsequent trial was unfair to the accused. Thus one can envisage 43 circumstances which calculate an unreasonable delay on the part of the prosecution in 44 bringing proceedings to trial that so unfairly and permanently prejudice the ability of an 45 accused to defend himself that no subsequent trial could be a fair one."

46 His Honour was disposed, as was the Chief Justice, to adopt a broad view of abuse of process so 47 that the prosecution of an accused in circumstances where the trial could not be fair might 48 amount to such. He said:

1 "An unfair trial represents a miscarriage of the curial process. If circumstances
 2 exist in which it can be seen in advance that the effect of prolonged and unjustifiable 3 delay is that any trial must necessarily be an unfair one, the continuation of the 4 proceedings to the stage of trial against the wishes of the accused will constitute an
 5 abuse of that curial process. In such a case, the continuation of proceedings to the stage
 6 of trial will inevitably infringe the right not to be tried unfairly and a court which possess
 7 jurisdiction to prevent abuse of its process, possesses jurisdiction at the suit of the 8 accused to stay the proceedings pursuant to that power."

9 Toohey, J. also declined to treat the principles of abuse of process and the right to a fair trial as 10 separate and distinct. He said:

11 "It is consistent with authority in principle to regard each notion as part of the responsibility of 12 the courts to see that justice is done for the parties and the wider community, ensuring that the 13 appropriate remedy is applied in the particular case. Where proceedings have been instituted for 14 an improper purpose (abuse of process), no remedy is likely to be appropriate other than a stay of 15 the proceedings. No directions given by the judge at trial can protect the accused in that 16 situation. On the other hand, where an accused has suffered some prejudice in his defence by 17 reason of delay in bringing his case to trial (a fair trial), it will often be possible to cure that 18 prejudice by evidentiary rulings and by directions to the jury regarding the way they 19 should approach the evidence adduced. But it is conceivable that delay has been so great and 20 consequent prejudice to an accused so manifest that directions cannot ensure a fair trial. In that 21 situation a stay of proceedings is the only remedy that meets the situation. Uncommon as that 22 situation may be, it cannot be excluded. To treat abuse of process and fair trial as entirely distinct 23 concepts carries the risk that the remedies in each case will be seen as necessarily different. That 24 will not always be the case. Greater flexibility and in the end greater justice will be achieved if 25 the two notions are understood as bearing on each other."

26 Gaudron, J. acknowledged the existence of a discretionary power to grant a permanent stay of 27 proceedings founded not on any narrow view of abuse of process but a power exercisable if the 28 administration of justice so demands. The power was to serve the general purpose of controlling 29 the court's process and proceedings and accordingly:

30 "The limited scope of the power to grant a permanent stay necessarily directs an enquiry 31 whether there are other means by which the defect attending the proceedings can be 32 eliminated or remedied. And the purpose directs attention to the legal propriety of the 33 process or proceeding, as distinct from any broad consideration of the general merits of 34 the case ... Another feature attending criminal proceedings and relevant to the grant of a 35 permanent stay thereof is that a trial judge, by reason of the duty to ensure the fairness of 36 a trial, has a number of discretionary powers which may be exercised in the course of a 37 trial, including the power to reject evidence which is technically admissible but which 38 would operate unfairly against the accused ... The exercise of the power to reject 39 evidence, either alone or in combination with a trial judge's other powers to control 40 criminal proceedings, will often suffice to remedy any feature of the proceedings which 41 might otherwise render them unjust or unfair. The existence and availability of these 42 powers, when considered in the light of the necessary limited scope of the power to grant 43 a permanent stay, serve to indicate that a court should have regard to the existence of 44 all its various powers, and should only grant a permanent stay if satisfied that no 45 other means is available to remedy that feature which, if unremedied, would render 46 the proceedings so seriously defective, whether by reason of unfairness, injustice or 47 otherwise as to demand the grant of a permanent stay."

48 In all of the passages quoted, the emphasis has been added by me.

49 I take from that case the following propositions which govern the way in which I should 50 approach the present matter.

1. There is a power in this court to stay proceedings either permanently or conditionally.
2. It is a power to be exercised in exceptional circumstances only, where the making of any other order would be ineffectual to secure the object of the exercise of the power.
3. The object of the exercise of the power is to protect an accused person from being exposed to a trial which in the circumstances must be unfair.
4. The exercise of the power is discretionary and involves a balancing of the interests of the accused on the one hand with, on the other, the community's right to expect that persons charged with criminal offences are brought to trial.
5. The conditions for the exercise of the power look not only to the fact of unfair treatment of the accused but also to its source. Distinctions are to be drawn between situations of unfairness attributable to the conduct of the accused, the conduct of the prosecutor, or the conduct of some person or body outside the court's control.
6. The conditions for the exercise of the power are not satisfied merely by demonstrating that the accused has been or is being in some respect treated unfairly, whether or not there is a means available to the court to remedy such unfairness at the time when it was brought to notice. The condition of the exercise of the power is that the trial itself will be an unfair trial.

If therefore the Prosecutor failed to notify the accused that his/her own lawyer had given statements against him/her then I view the Prosecutor concealment of this was to cause a miscarriage of justice and perverting the course of justice.

QUOTE RELEVANT LAW - REGINA v. JUDITH WARD

RELEVANT LAW - REGINA v. JUDITH WARD

On 4 November 1974 Judith Ward was convicted in the Crown Court of 12 charges of murder and other offences arising out of her alleged involvement in a number of IRA bombings. On 17 September 1991, the Home Secretary referred her case to the Court of Appeal (Criminal Appeal Division) acting under s.17(l)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968. On 4 June 1992, that court quashed the convictions on all counts. One of the substantial matters that led to that outcome was the failure of the DPP to disclose before or during the trial certain evidence not used at the trial, some in the possession of the police, some in the possession of forensic scientists engaged on behalf of the prosecution and some in the possession of the DPP itself. The judgment of the court delivered by Glidewell, LJ. makes a close examination of the obligation cast upon the prosecution to make disclosure of material in its possession but not proposed to be used at the trial. The obligation to disclose arises in relation to evidence which is or may be material in

1 relation to the issues. Before trial, the measure of the obligation to disclose relates to the issues
 2 which are reasonably expected to arise in the course of the trial. During the trial, the obligation
 3 may be extended, insofar as issues unexpectedly arise in the course of the trial which were not
 4 reasonably foreseeable beforehand. The obligation is to disclose only such evidence as is or may 5 be material - which means something less than crucial but admits of the possibility that there 6 may be material in the possession of the prosecution, the nature of which is such that it is 7 relatively so insignificant in the context of the case viewed as a whole that non-disclosure may 8 be excused. The court emphasized however that the scope of the application of the proposition 9 that there may be evidence the disclosure of which is not required because it is not material is 10 limited to matters which at the end of the day can be seen to have been of no real significance.

11 "The possibility that this view will ultimately be taken of any particular piece of 12 disclosable evidence should be wholly excluded from the minds of the prosecution when 13 the question of disclosure is being considered. Non- disclosure is a potent source of 14 injustice and even with the benefit of hindsight, it will often be difficult to say whether or 15 not an undisclosed item of evidence might have shifted the balance or opened up a new 16 line of defence."

17 The court held that the extent of the prosecution's duty of disclosure was not adequately to be 18 measured in terms of the Attorney-General's Guidelines (1982) 74 Cr. App. R. 302. The 19 accused is entitled to be supplied with "all relevant evidence of help to the accused" which is not 20 to be led at the trial. The court emphasized that "all relevant evidence of help to the accused" is 21 "not limited to evidence which will obviously advance the accused's case". It is of help to the 22 accused to have the opportunity of considering all the material evidence which the prosecution 23 have gathered, and from which the prosecution have made their selection of evidence to be led.
 24 The court recognized the existence of public interest immunity and the possibility that material
 25 might ultimately be withheld from the accused by reason of the public interest. It emphasized, 26 however, that it was no part of the duty of the prosecuting authority to make a decision that 27 certain material should be withheld on such grounds. The decision whether evidence otherwise 28 disclosable should be withheld from disclosure on the grounds of public interest immunity was 29 one to be made only by the court.

30 In Ward, there was no issue about the fact of non-disclosure, and the major matter argued was 31 whether in the circumstances of the particular case the failure to disclose particular evidence
 32 amounted to a material irregularity in the trial. Consequently, a great deal of the very lengthy 33 judgment is concerned with an analysis of the significance of particular items of evidence in 34 relation to the issues at the trial, and needs no further comment. Shortly, the materials not 35 disclosed comprised a number of statements made by the accused at different stages of the police 36 investigation; the statements of a number of other witnesses whom the police had interviewed; 37 and material in the possession of the forensic scientists, which was relevant to the evaluation of 38 the results of certain tests carried out by the scientists, upon which the Crown case heavily relied.
 39 At pp.60-61 of the judgment, the court summarized the principles of law and practice which in 40 its view at the present time govern the disclosure of evidence by the prosecution before trial.

41 "(i) 'Where the prosecution have taken a statement from a person whom they know 42 can give material evidence but decide not to call that person as a witness, they are 43 under a duty to make that person available as a witness for the defence ...' Archbold, 44 44th edition, paragraph 4-726. It is part of the same passage as is quoted with approval in 45 this court in Lawson (1990) 90 Cr. App. R. 107 at 114 from the preceding edition.
 46 'Material evidence' means evidence which tends either to weaken the prosecution 47 case or to strengthen the defence case.

48 (ii) Unless there are good reasons for not doing so, the duty should normally be 49 performed by supplying copies of the witness statements to the defence or allowing them

1 to inspect the statements and make copies: Lawson. Where there are good reasons for not 2 supplying copies of the statements, the duty to disclose can be performed by supplying 3 the name and address of the witness to the defence.

4 (iii) In relation to statements recording relevant interviews with the accused, as we have 5 already said, subject to the possibility of public interest immunity, the defence are 6 entitled to be supplied with copies of all such statements.

7 (iv) In relation to the evidence of expert witnesses, both for the prosecution and the 8 defence, the Crown Court (Advance Notice of Expert Evidence) Rules 1987 now require 9 that any party to the proceedings in the Crown Court who proposes to adduce expert 10 evidence must, as soon after committal as possible, furnish the other party with a written 11 statement of any finding or opinion of which he proposes to give evidence, and where a 12 request in writing is made by that other party, either supply copies of, or allow the other 13 party to examine, the record of any observation, test, calculation or other procedure on 14 which such finding or opinion is based. There is an exception to rule 4 which is not here
 15 relevant. What the rules do not say in terms is that if an expert witness has carried out 16 experiments or tests which tend to disprove or cast doubt upon the opinion he is 17 expressing, or if such experiments or tests have been carried out in his laboratory and are 18 known to him, the party calling him must also disclose the record of such experiments or 19 tests. In our view the rules do not state this in terms because they can only be read as 20 requiring the record of all relevant experiments and tests to be disclosed. It follows that 21 an expert witness who has carried out or knows of experiments or tests which tend to 22 cast doubt on the opinion he is expressing is in our view under a clear obligation to bring 23 the records of such experiments and tests to the attention of the solicitor who is 24 instructing him so that it may be disclosed to the other party. No doubt this process can 25 often be simplified by the expert for one party (usually the prosecution) supplying his 26 results, and any necessary working papers, to the expert advising the other party (the 27 defence) directly.

28 (v) It is true that public interest immunity provides an exception to the general duty of 29 disclosure. For present purposes it is not necessary to attempt to analyse the requirements
 30 of public interest immunity. But in argument the question arose whether, if in a criminal 31 case the prosecution wished to claim public interest immunity for documents helpful to 32 the defence, the prosecution is in law obliged to give notice to the defence of the asserted 33 right to withhold the documents so that, if necessary, the court can be asked to rule on the 34 legitimacy of the prosecution's asserted claim. Mr. Mansfield's position was simple and 35 readily comprehensible. He submitted that there was such a duty, and that it admitted of 36 no qualification or exception. Moreover, he contended that it would be incompatible with 37 a defendant's absolute right to a fair trial to allow the prosecution, who occupy an 38 adversarial position in criminal proceedings, to be judge in their own cause on the 39 asserted claim to immunity. Unfortunately, and despite repeated questions by the court, 40 the Crown's position on this vital issue remained opaque to the end. We are fully 41 persuaded by Mr. Mansfield's reasoning on this point. It seems to us that he was right to 42 remind us that when the prosecution acted as judge in their own cause on the issue of 43 public interest immunity in this case they committed a significant number of errors which 44 affected the fairness of the proceedings. Police (sic; presumably an erroneous substitution 45 for 'these') considerations therefore powerfully reinforce the view that it would be wrong 46 to allow the prosecution to withhold material documents without giving any notice of that 47 fact to the defence. If, in a wholly exceptional case, the prosecution are not prepared 48 to have the issue of public interest immunity determined by a court, the result must 49 inevitably be that the prosecution will have to be abandoned. (emphasis added)

1 (vi) For the avoidance of doubt we make it clear that we have not overlooked the 2 Attorney General's Guidelines for the disclosure of 'unused' material to the defence in 3 cases to be heard on indictment: see (1982) 74 Cr. App. R. 302. It is sufficient to say that 4 nothing in those guidelines can derogate in any way from the legal rules which we have 5 stated. It is therefore unnecessary for us to consider to what extent the Attorney General's 6 guidelines relating to 'sensitive material' (the phrase used in those guidelines) are in 7 conformity with the law as we have expounded it in the judgment."

9 QUOTE

10 Ward deals and purports to deal only with the obligation of disclosure that falls upon the 11 prosecuting party. The analogy that Mr. Nicholson seeks to advance is not valid. Where the 12 prosecutor wrongly refuses to produce documents, that of itself might justify a stay, without 13 enquiry except as to whether any of the material withheld is "relevant material of help to the 14 accused" - that phrase being understood in the expansive sense explained in the judgment. The 15 obligation of disclosure that rests on the Crown is an obligation of voluntary or spontaneous 16 disclosure, not a matter merely of responding to a request or complying with a subpoena.
 17 But where an accused person seeks access to information contained in documents which are in 18 the hands of a person or body which is not the prosecutor, no such obligation of disclosure can 19 arise. The only obligation of such a person or body is to comply with the requirements of a 20 subpoena validly issued.

21 If, because there is a valid claim of privilege or public interest immunity, or because (as here) the 22 party concerned is not amenable to subpoena, the documents are not made available, the ground 23 (if any) of complaint on the part of the accused is not that there is a breach of an obligation of 24 disclosure, but that because he has not access to the documents in question, his trial cannot be a 25 fair trial. In other words, the relevant principles are to be found not in Ward but in Jago.

27 QUOTE

28 The prosecution is a prosecution in Australia for an alleged offence against the law of Australia
 29 and it is conducted by the Commonwealth Director of Public Prosecutions. The obligation of 30 disclosure does not fall on those who, whether in Australia or elsewhere, investigated the matter
 31 - it is not an obligation cast on the Australian Federal Police for example. It is an obligation 32 that falls upon the prosecutor but the extent of it is such as to require disclosure of 33 materials in the possession of those by whom the investigation was carried out so far as the 34 DPP is in a position to compel production. Thus the DPP is obliged to disclose all material 35 able to assist the accused which is in the possession of Australian authorities and all 36 material which has come into the DPP's possession from the Royal Hong Kong Police, the 37 Royal Hong Kong Customs or any other source. It is true that in Ward it was made clear
 38 that the obligation of disclosure extended to materials in the possession not only of the DPP 39 and the police but also forensic scientists independent of both who had been engaged to 40 carry out investigations: but it would seem that the DPP was in a position to compel 41 production of materials supplied to it by its consultants or held by the consultants on its 42 behalf - hence the obligation of disclosure extended so far.

45 RELEVANT LAW - INTERNATIONAL COVENANT

46 By the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission Act 1986, the Commonwealth established the 47 Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission as a body corporate with perpetual succession, with 48 functions including "to promote an understanding and acceptance, and the public discussion, of

1 human rights in Australia" and "where the Commission considers it appropriate to do so, with the 2 leave of the court hearing the proceedings and subject to any conditions imposed by the court, to
 3 intervene in proceedings that involve human rights issues". "Human rights" is defined in s.3(1)
 4 of the Act to mean "the rights and freedoms and recognized in the Covenant, declared by the 5 declarations or recognized or declared by any relevant international instrument".

6 By "the Covenant" is meant "the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights", a copy of 7 the English text of which is set out in Schedule 2 of the Act.

8 Paragraph 3 of Article 14 provides:

9 "In the determination of any criminal charge against him, everyone shall be entitled to the 10 following minimum guarantees, in full equality;

11 ...

12 (b) to have adequate time and facilities for the preparation of his defence and to 13 communicate with counsel of his own choosing;

14 (e) to examine, or have examined, the witnesses against him and to obtain the attendance
 15 and examination of witnesses on his behalf under the same conditions as witnesses 16 against him."

17 The Commission resolved to seek leave to intervene in this stay application (not the trial itself, if 18 it proceeds) for the purpose of assisting the court in relation to the human rights issues said to be 19 involved in the proceedings. I have determined that the Commission should have leave to 20 intervene for that purpose and that it is proper that I should receive submissions on his behalf in 21 view of recent authority emphasising the relevance of the content of the Covenant to the 22 common law of Australia. See for example Mabo v. Queensland (1992) 66 ALJR 408 at 417,
 23 422, per Brennan, J. and per Kirby, P. in Regina v. Greer (Court of Criminal Appeal, unreported 24 14 August 1992). In Mabo, Brennan, J. said (at 417):-

25 "The peace and order of Australian society is built on the legal system. It can be 26 modified to bring it into conformity with contemporary notions of justice and 27 human rights, but it cannot be destroyed. It is not possible, a priori, to distinguish 28 between cases that express a skeletal principle and those which do not, but no case can 29 command unquestioning adherence if the rule it expresses seriously offends the values of 30 justice and human rights (especially equality before the law) which are aspirations of the 31 contemporary Australian legal system. If a postulated rule of the common law expressed 32 in earlier cases seriously offends those contemporary values, the question arises whether 33 the rule should be maintained and applied. Whenever such a question arises, it is 34 necessary to assess whether the particular rule is an essential rule of our legal system and 35 whether, if the rule were to be overturned, the disturbance to be apprehended would be 36 disproportionate to the benefit flowing from the overturning."

37 I have no difficulty with that. It seems to me abundantly clear that the rule of the common law 38 expressed by the majority in Jago (ironically, not altogether commanding the assent of Brennan, 39 J.) does not offend but is on the other hand entirely consonant with "contemporary values", 40 including those expressed in the Covenant. In Greer, the learned President observed that those 41 basic rights expressed in the Covenant are rights which the common law in Australia will 42 ordinarily respect.

43 It appears to me that the relevance of the Covenant to the present matter is this and no more than 44 this, that it puts the court on notice that a trial conducted in circumstances where the accused has 45 not been accorded fully the rights referred to in paragraphs (b) and (e) of paragraph 3 of Article 46 14 of the Covenant may be an unfair trial within the meaning of the principles established by 47 Jago.

48 I would have welcomed some assistance from counsel for all parties as to the meaning of the 49 phrase "in full equality" in the opening paragraph of clause 3 of Article 14 of the Covenant. It

.1 may refer to equality with all other persons facing trial in this country - paragraph (b) is perhaps 2 more compatible with that reading - or, equality with the prosecutor.

 5 QUOTE
 6 I have said, that in my view the effect of the Covenant is that it draws to the attention of the 7 court that a trial, which takes place in circumstances where the so called "minimum
 8 guarantees" are not afforded to the accused, may be unfair within the Jago principle. It
 9 does not in my view follow that it must be unfair. It is necessary to examine the circumstances 10 and see to what extent in the particular case the fact that the accused is deprived in whole or in 11 part of one of the rights purported to be guaranteed by the Covenant in fact prejudices him, and 12 whether it does so to such an extent that the trial is to be seen as unfair.

13 "UNFAIR TRIAL"

14 It is clear from the judgments in Jago that a stay of proceedings may be the appropriate 15 remedy where the prosecution is an abuse of process in the traditional and narrowest sense
 16 (and, per Brennan, J., only then) - that is, where the prosecution is brought for an 17 improper purpose, or is oppressive (eg. successive prosecutions for the same act) etc.; but 18 also where the continuance of the prosecution will be in a broader sense an abuse because,
 19 whether on account of delay or for some other reason, the outcome will be a trial which, no 20 matter how the trial judge may utilize his many powers and discretions, will be unfair. It is 21 clear that it is not the possibility of unfairness to the accused which calls for the drastic 22 remedy of a permanent stay, for such may well be mitigated, or obviated, by other 23 remedies within the discretion of a judge pre-trial or within the discretion of the judge at 24 the trial. Absent abuse of process in the narrowest sense, a stay is justified if it appears, at 25 the time when the stay is sought, that no other exercise of the court's discretion at that 26 stage or during the trial is likely to avoid a trial which, after the trial, will be seen to be 27 unfair.

28 It is perhaps worth pausing for a moment to ask what is meant by a "fair trial" or an "unfair 29 trial". Jago and other relevant authorities from various jurisdictions were discussed by Professor 30 David Paciocco, The Stay of Proceedings as a Remedy in Criminal Cases: Abusing the Abuse of 31 Process Concept (1991) 15 Crim. L.i 315. At p.332-333 the learned author said:

32 "The 'fair trial' rationale has been challenged on the basis of its uncertainty. It has been 33 said that the invocation of such a broad discretionary power would be 'unacceptable in a 34 country acknowledging the rule of law.' DPP v. Humphrys (1977) AC 1 at 24. and its 35 dangers have been lamented as 'too obvious to need stating'. Connelly (1963) 3 All E.R.
 36 510 per Lord Edmund Davies at 519. Discretionary powers are not, of course, unknown 37 in the law. They can be exercised on a more or less principled basis, and this is 38 particularly true, I would suggest, of a discretion to ensure that a trial is fair. There is a 39 significant difference between saying that judges have the power to stay proceedings to 40 achieve a fair result (which might arguably be a subjectively exercised power not in 41 keeping with the rule of law) and saying that judges have the power to stay proceedings 42 to ensure a fair trial. This is because the fairness of a trial can be tested by its 43 conformity with those principles underlying the accusatorial system of justice ..A 44 fair trial is a public hearing in which the Crown makes a specific allegation, for 45 which the accused has never before been convicted or acquitted, that the accused 46 has violated a pre-existing rule of law, during which trial the Crown bears the 47 burden of establishing that allegation with evidence before an independent and 48 neutral trier of law and fact, without compelling the accused in any way to 49 participate in establishing the allegation against him until a case to meet has been 50 established, and in which the accused is provided with a reasonable opportunity to

1 make full answer and defence. It is only where the conduct of those responsible for 2 the prosecution of an offence has jeopardized one or more of these accusatorial
 3 principles that the power to act to ensure a fair trial should arise."

4 The remedy of stay is available to prevent the occurrence of an unfair trial: to prevent injustice.
 5 It is a remedy not to be resorted to wherever and whenever there is a risk of procedural injustice
 6 but only where if, if the trial is permitted to proceed, the outcome (if a conviction results) would 7 be such that a court of criminal appeal after the event would be unable to say that no miscarriage
 8 of justice had occurred. The equation of the concept of an unfair trial with the concept of 9 miscarriage of justice is implicit in the judgment of Mahoney, JA. in Gill v. Walton (1991-92)
 10 25 NSWLR 190 at 210-211. It may, as his Honour pointed out, include the situation where there
 11 is a denial of natural justice; but I would with respect include his Honour's use of the term 12 "unacceptable injustice" which extends beyond the traditional concept of a denial of natural 13 justice to embrace the "procedural or evidentiary fairness of a particular trial"; but does not 14 extend so far as to give rise to the power to stay a prosecution "whenever there will be less than 15 perfect justice". (His Honour dissented in respect of the outcome of that particular case, but the 16 approach of the other members of the court was entirely different and did not, as I understand the 17 matter, involve any dissent from the principles which Mahoney, JA. expressed). Mahoney, JA.
 18 went on to say:

19 "It is settled that, if a party to a proceeding cannot or will not have a fair trial of the 20 matters involved, the supervisory jurisdiction of this court may be invoked. I do not mean 21 by this that this power may be exercised whenever there will be less than perfect justice.
 22 This power is exercisable when the trial of the issue will depart so far from perfect justice
 23 that the result is unacceptable. The mere fact that a defendant in a proceeding, criminal or 24 civil, suffers from disadvantages which, in a perfect system operating perfectly, he would 25 not suffer, is not sufficient to warrant intervention by this court. I made reference to this 26 in, for example, the Barron case" (Barron v. Attorney General for New South Wales
 27 (1987) 10 NSWLR 215 at 226-227) "and in the Cooke case" (Cooke v. Purcell (1988) 14
 28 NSWLR 51 at 65-67). In Jago, the members of the High Court made reference to this 29 matter (at 33, 48 et. seq., 55-56, 71, 76-78). No doubt in each case the court will have 30 regard to what, in other cases which have been decided by it, it has seen to be an 31 unacceptable disadvantage. But in the end the court will make a decision, more or less 32 normative, in respect of the particular disadvantages in question."

33 A court of criminal appeal asked to set aside a conviction upon the grounds of some 34 demonstrated procedural defect or error of law or discretion does not intervene merely upon 35 demonstration of the error; but only if the court finds itself unable to say that no actual 36 miscarriage of justice has resulted. Where the case is able to be seen in advance as of that nature,
 37 the fact that the accused if convicted might confidently expect to be successful on appeal is not a 38 sufficient reason to refuse a stay: Barton v. The Queen (1980) 147 CLR 75 at 96-97. However,
 39 the existence of a right of appeal is not irrelevant: the grant of a stay is reserved for the case 40 where "no other means is available" to avoid injustice, and unless so much is established at the 41 time of the stay application, the case for stay is not made out. It is necessary to bear in mind the 42 community's interest in having a trial (Jago per Mason, CJ. at p.34., Brennan, J. at p.4.9, 43 Toohey, J. at p.72) and unless there is seen in advance to be a "fundamental defect which goes to 44 the root of the trial of such a nature that nothing the trial judge can do in the conduct of the trial 45 can relieve against its unfair consequences", the proper course is to refuse the stay, leaving the 46 accused to his right of appeal, when with the benefit of hindsight, the question whether the 47 conviction was a miscarriage of justice may better be able to be determined.
 48 As it seems to me, when it is said that a stay must be granted to prevent an unfair trial, what is 49 referred to is a trial so affected by the events that have happened that it can fairly be said in 50 advance that a guilty verdict would be set aside after the event as a miscarriage of justice.

1 It is not enough that there be a risk of miscarriage - indeed there is a risk of such in every trial. It
 2 is to be recognized that much that appears, in advance of the trial, to present such a risk can be
 3 (and in the ordinary trial is) nullified by the appropriate exercise of the trial judge's powers and 4 discretions. An "unfair trial" in the relevant sense is only a trial of which it can be said in 5 advance, that notwithstanding all that the trial judge may do, a miscarriage of justice will be the 6 outcome. The degree of probability of miscarriage of justice that must be shown is a high one:
 7 not a mere possibility that the trial will be unfair; not that such an outcome is "on the cards", or 8 just probable, or very probable; "there must be a fundamental defect" (per Mason, CJ.), it must 9 be seen in advance that "any trial must necessarily be an unfair one" (per Deane, J.).

10 It follows that a trial may be permitted to proceed even after gross delay or even where the 11 accused has not had the benefit of the "minimum guarantees" mandated by the international 12 Covenant, where he has no legal representation or has been unable to locate or summon 13 witnesses whom he would have wished to call, or to have access to documents which he would 14 wish to have used, unless it can be seen in advance that the situation is such that should a 15 conviction result it would represent a miscarriage.

16 The test therefore that has to be applied is a demanding one. It is a test which has not been 17 addressed by the submissions advanced on behalf of the applicant. Counsel has been content to 18 demonstrate what materials have been withheld from the accused and to what forensic purpose 19 such materials may have been put; but has not gone the necessary further step, to show how the 20 lack of any such material so relates to the issues in the case that a trial in the absence of access to 21 such material will necessarily be in the relevant sense unfair. Notwithstanding the lack of 22 assistance from counsel in that regard, this is a matter that lies at the heart of the application and 23 which I must consider in due course.

27 Undoubtedly, the fact that the accused cannot compel the production of documents before this 28 court, and cannot have the issues which arise in respect of such production determined by this 29 court after proper arguments, inspection of the documents by the trial judge, if appropriate, and 30 subject to a right of appeal, are circumstances which are of great relevance in determining 31 whether the trial which may follow must be an unfair one. But it seems to me that it is not 32 possible to reach a conclusion that the trial, even in those circumstances, must necessarily be 33 unfair, without regard to what it is that is withheld from the accused, what is the nature of the 34 forensic purpose that it would serve if produced, and what is the extent of the prejudice that the 35 accused will suffer. For example, if there is evidence available to the accused to support his case 36 on a particular issue, it may be very difficult for him to show that he is in any way or 37 significantly prejudiced because he cannot get access to other evidence upon the same issue, 38 because a party in possession of other evidence upon that issue fails or refuses to produce it,
 39 because he is unable to ask the trial court to rule on the propriety of the objection that is taken, 40 and because he cannot invoke the coercive powers of the trial court to have that material brought 41 before it. In short, the question whether the trial will be an unfair one because the accused is 42 unable to compel the production of documents before the court, and unable to have the benefit of 43 a ruling by the court upon such objections to production as may be taken, must depend upon an 44 evaluation of the forensic purpose to which the documents would be put and the significance of 45 each particular item in the context of the case as a whole.

46 THE PAPER CHASE

47 The resolution of the stay application would have been assisted had the applicant's counsel 48 provided a single definitive statement of the documents which, it is asserted, were at the time of 49 the hearing still withheld from the accused, and the lack of which is asserted to produce (in

1 conjunction with the asserted lack of access to relevant witnesses) the consequence that the trial 2 of the accused must be unfair.

6 FORENSIC PURPOSE

7 Upon the approach derived from Jago v. District Court, whether a stay should be ordered
 8 requires consideration of the question whether the fact that the accused cannot get access before 9 the trial to the documents he lists nor make use of them at the trial will (alone or in conjunction 10 with other circumstances) cause any trial that ensues to be unfair. That compels an enquiry as to 11 whether any document to which he points in fact exists, and (if it does) as to the use to which the 12 accused would put such document or class of document at the trial or in the course of 13 preparation, that is to say, for what forensic purpose is access sought.

14 It is no basis for objection to a subpoena that the party who served it does not know whether or 15 not documents exist meeting the description in the subpoena; although if he is not able to prove 16 that documents exist he will not be in a position to invite the court to deal with the subpoenaed
 17 party for disobedience to the subpoena. So, it is no objection to the accused's case merely that he 18 has asked for the production of documents some of which he does not know to exist in fact.
 19 However, the want of such documents cannot be shown to lead to an unfair trial unless it is 20 shown that such documents do exist (or, perhaps, having at some former time existed, have since 21 been destroyed: indeed the destruction of evidence which would otherwise have been available 22 has been a major consideration in many cases where a stay of proceedings has been granted on 23 the basis of delay). The question whether each particular document to which the accused points 24 has been shown to exist is something to be dealt with as a matter of fact in respect of each 25 document as I come to it.

26 The enquiry into forensic purpose is similar to that which arises where, upon the return of a 27 subpoena for the production of documents by a stranger to the litigation, the party producing 28 objects to the documents being made available for inspection by the parties (but after any 29 objection to the subpoena itself or claim for privilege or public interest immunity has been 30 disposed of adversely to the party producing): in terms of the analysis undertaken by Moffitt, P.
 31 in Waind v. Hill & National Employers' Mutual General Association Limited (1978) 1
 32 NSWLR 372, the second step. His Honour pointed out that there are three steps in the procedure 33 of having a third party bring documents to court, and in their use thereafter:

34 "The first is obeying the subpoena, by the witness bringing the documents to the court 35 and handing them to the judge. This step involves the determination of any objections of 36 the witness to the subpoena, or to the production of the documents to the court pursuant 37 to the subpoena. The second step is the decision of the judge concerning the preliminary 38 use of the documents, which includes whether or not permission should be given to a 39 party or parties to inspect the documents. The third step is the admission into evidence of 40 the document in whole or in part; or the use of it in the process of evidence being put 41 before the court by cross- examination or otherwise. It is the third step which alone 42 provides material upon which ultimate decision in the case rests. In these three steps the 43 stranger and the parties have different rights, and the function of the judge differs."

44 In relation to the second step, the learned President posed the question, "Does he" (ie the trial 45 judge) "have a judicial discretion to permit the use of the documents in any such way as he 46 considers will aid a proper decision of the issues between the parties, by facilitating the 47 elucidation of the truth in respect of relevant facts ...?" (p.383) and in the course of the following 48 pages, gave a firm affirmative answer. His Honour at p.384 observed:

1 "It is true that in the exercise of the power in relation to the subpoena, the invasion of the 2 rights of a third party have been jealously guarded (sic). It is accepted that the documents
 3 should not go beyond the judge against objection of the owner, unless there is valid
 4 reason to do so. It is clear that it can only be legitimate to do so, so far as is necessary
 5 in the proper conduct of the litigation. It is difficult to see why to do that which is 6 'requisite for the purpose of justice' should be restricted by some arbitrary limit ... If a 7 subpoena for production is properly issued and not set aside, and, if there is ruled to be no 8 valid objection to the production of the documents to the court, then the documents are in 9 the control of the judge who is invested with jurisdiction to take all steps necessary for 10 the proper trial of the issues before him, subject to the due observance of any relevant 11 rules and procedures of the court. So far as factual matters are concerned, the proper 12 conduct of the litigation can only be that which fairly leads to the introduction of all 13 such evidence as is material to the issues to be tried, and the testing of that evidence 14 by the accepted procedures of the court. The only legitimate purpose of requiring 15 the production, and permitted the inspection of a stranger's documents can be to 16 add, in the end, to the relevant evidence in the case."

17 At p.385 his Honour stated the practice to be as follows:

18 "Where however objection is raised by the owner of the documents, the judge examines 19 the documents with some care to ensure there is no abuse of the subpoena, and to 20 determine whether the documents appear relevant in the sense that they relate to the 21 subject matter of the proceedings in which event he will permit inspection by one or 22 both parties at an appropriate time. The question of their admissibility without more, in 23 accordance with the rules of evidence, does not then arise because, if relevant, they may 24 be admitted in a variety of ways, as by first establishing facts or adopting procedures 25 which make them admissible or by their being admitted by consent. If apparently 26 relevant, I do not see how the objections of the stranger could prevent their 27 admission in evidence, by consent or otherwise, or the inspection which may lead to 28 this occurring."

29 His Honour's statement at p.384 that "the only legitimate purpose of requiring the production and 30 permitting the inspection of a stranger's documents can be to add in the end to the relevant 31 evidence in the case" is not to be understood as meaning that there is no right to inspect 32 documents except such as would themselves be admissible. That is made abundantly clear by the 33 sentence immediately preceding; and by the passage on p.385 that I have quoted also. Indeed, it
 34 was established in Madison v. Goldrick (1976) 1 NSWLR 651 that an accused is prima facie 35 entitled to inspect any document which may give him the opportunity to pursue a proper and 36 fruitful course in cross-examination, in the latter case Samuels, JA. pointed out that:

37 "Unless some means is available of obtaining access to documents such as witness's 38 statements, a defendant ... may be quite unable to establish vital discrepancies where they 39 do in fact occur."

40 In Regina v. Saleam (1989) 16 NSWLR 14, the Court of Criminal Appeal adapted to the 41 question of the right of access to subpoenaed documents the test expressed by Gibbs, CJ. in 42 Alister v. The Queen with regard to the question whether a judge required to rule upon a claim 43 for public interest immunity should inspect documents. Hunt, J. (as he then was) said:

44 "In my view when a trial judge is faced with a subpoena of this kind, he should require 45 counsel for the accused to identify expressly and with precision the legitimate forensic 46 purpose for which he seeks access to the documents, and the judge should refuse access
 47 to the documents until such an identification has been made ... In my view the criterion
 48 finally suggested by Gibbs, CJ. in Mister v. The Queen" (Alister v. The Queen (1984)

in relation to which a claim for public interest immunity had been made is appropriate to be applied also when the trial judge has to determine whether access should be granted to documents subpoenaed from the police in relation to which objection has been taken that no legitimate forensic purpose exists for their production. He must be satisfied that it is 'on the cards' that the documents would materially assist the accused in his defence. Before granting access when such an objection has been taken the judge should usually inspect the documents (or those which the Crown may suggest are sufficiently representative) for himself, as it is unfortunately not unknown for the objection taken to be misconceived ... If no public interest immunity or other privilege is claimed (and upheld), and if a legitimate forensic purpose for their production has been demonstrated, the judge should not withhold access to the documents simply on the basis that in his view that purpose would not be satisfied in that particular case because he can see nothing in the documents which will in fact assist the accused in his defence. Provided that a legitimate forensic purpose has been demonstrated, it should be for the accused (or, in appropriate cases, for his legal advisers only) to satisfy himself on that score after his own inspection of the documents."

In summary, therefore, the accused will have shown a legitimate forensic purpose for which he seeks access to the documents in question if he shows that they have apparent relevance to the subject matter of the trial, meaning thereby the issues to be tried. If they have no apparent relevance, there is no legitimate forensic purpose attaching to them; if they have apparent relevance, and hence are capable of being used to add to the relevant evidence, either directly by tender or indirectly by facilitating the testing of other evidence, it is for the accused and his counsel to determine whether they can in fact be used, and it would be wrong to conclude that they have no legitimate forensic purpose, merely because it does not appear to the judge that the documents in question can in fact be used to the advantage of the accused.

END QUOTE

QUOTE

Were the question in fact one of granting or withholding access to documents in fact produced on subpoena, the Crown's submission that the documents were not capable of serving the suggested forensic purpose would not arise: R. v. Saleam (supra). It will, however, be a matter of significance in determining whether the fact that the accused is deprived of access to documents in respect of which a legitimate forensic purpose has been identified is likely to cause the trial to be unfair.

QUOTE

The proposed investigation of the adequacy, competence or thoroughness of the investigation, implicit in paragraph 5 and expressed in paragraph 10(c) appears on the face of it to be no more than a fishing expedition in the sense specifically deprecated in Associated Dominions Assurance Society Pty. Limited v. John Fairfax & Sons Pty. Limited:

"A 'fishing expedition' in the sense in which the phrase has been used in the law means as I understand it that a person who has no evidence that fish of a particular kind are in a pool desires to be at liberty to drag it for the purpose of finding out whether there are any there or not."

To show that police did not investigate as thoroughly as might have been done (paragraph 10(b)) is a matter of no relevance or significance unless there is some reason to believe that a better investigation would have revealed matters of assistance to the accused; not merely matters implicating others. The existence of any such matter would have to be shown, or at least reason to believe in its existence. One would have thought that the accused was best placed to know of

1 the existence of any exculpatory material upon which he wished to rely, but he has given no 2 evidence of the existence of any such.
 3 The forensic purpose expressed in paragraph 10(a) amounts to fishing, in the sense that there is 4 no evidence that informers had been coached to expand or embroider their stories to the 5 detriment of the accused; although there was some cross-examination at the first trial along those 6 lines. Can it nevertheless be justified? Just as it may be a legitimate forensic purpose to seek 7 access to statements of witnesses in advance of their giving evidence, so that discrepancies may 8 be detected, it may also, as was the case in Madison v. Goldrick, be a legitimate forensic 9 purpose to seek access to statements in the possession of a police officer in order to show that he 10 had the wherewithal to construct what was alleged to have been a false confessional statement.
 11 That, however, falls short of showing the validity of the forensic purpose stated in paragraph 12 10(a). It would be one thing to obtain access to successive statements made by the same witness 13 in order to show how his story had developed or varied from time to time. In such a case, 14 however, the relevant material would be what appeared in the witness's statements, not what was 15 within the knowledge of police officers conducting the investigation - if indeed, the witness's 16 story had been expanded at the instigation of the police, the source was as likely to be in the 17 imagination as in the knowledge of the police officer.
 18 With these preliminary comments, I now turn to a consideration of the accused's claim in respect 19 of each group of documents he has sought.

20 DOCUMENTS DENIED TO THE ACCUSED

21 It appears to me that the onus which rests upon the accused to establish the factual basis of his 22 claim to a stay requires him to show, as to each document or class of documents of the 23 withholding of which he complains:

- 24 1. Some prima facie reason to believe in the existence of the document.
 - 25 2. That the documents are not available despite reasonable efforts on the part of the accused to procure them.
 - 26 3. A legitimate forensic purpose.
 - 27 4. In what way the lack of access to the document will render the trial unfair.
- 28 As I pointed out in the course of the argument, this last is not so much a matter of fact to be 29 proved by evidence, but a matter to be demonstrated by legal argument, on which basis I cut 30 short the oral evidence of Mr. Bilinsky and invited Mr. Nicholson to tell me from the bar table in 31 what way lack of access to each document would prejudice the accused.

35 DISCRETION

36 The power to order a stay of proceedings is said to be discretionary. In a sense that is so:

37 "The expression 'discretionary power' generally signifies a power exercisable by 38 reference to considerations no one of which and no combination of which is necessarily 39 determinative of the result. In other words it is a power which 'involves a considerable 40 latitude of individual choice of a conclusion': Russo v. Russo (1953) VLR 57 per Sholl, 41 J. at 62. See also Pattenden, The Judge, Discretion and the Criminal Trial (1982), p.
 42 Notwithstanding this latitude, a discretionary power is necessarily confined by general 43 principle. It is also confined by the matters which may be taken into account and by the 44 matters, if any, which must be taken into account in its exercise.": per Gauldron, J., Jago
 45 (supra) at 75-76.

1 In another sense, the power is not truly discretionary. It is rather a matter not of discretion but of 2 judgment. Once the court concludes that the circumstances are such that any trial that would 3 ensue must necessarily be unfair, notwithstanding anything that may be done by way of 4 interlocutory orders or rulings and directions at the trial, there is no option but to stay the 5 proceedings. On the other hand, once the court is satisfied that the circumstances, taking into 6 account all interlocutory orders that may be made and all rulings and directions that may be 7 given at the trial, are such that the trial will not inevitably be an unfair trial, there is no option but 8 to refuse to stay the proceedings.

24 In my view there can be no excuses as to the Victorian Police, [REDACTED] and 25 others having used Officers of the Court in violation to their positions to be informers of their 26 own clients because it undermines the credibility of the administration of justice and if anything
27 I view [REDACTED] by what I consider false/misleading claims
28 about why EF/Informer 3838/Lawyer X in 2005 commenced to be a registered informer I view 29 underlines that despite past warning the Victoria Police high ranking officers still will refuse to 30 be honest about matters.

32 Government Ministers, the police and others in such positions must be held to be model citizens
33 who will for sure uphold the law and not thwart the rule of law themselves for whatever purpose 34 they may deem it to justify.

36 The following may also indicate that criminal conduct far too often is ignored by the Victorian
37 Police. Perhaps by doing so they can achieve special treatment when certain people are elected 38 and gain certain political status as result to provide certain benefits, never mind it undermines 39 out democratic system.

1 where previously a barrister had failed proper representation. Because Lawyer X and others like
2 her who acted in conflict with their positions as being an Officer of the Court it is therefore that 3 the credibility of the administration of justice itself is in question. The failure of the Legal 4 Service Commission to take appropriate action when matters were reported also underlines this.
5 In essence lawyers being Officers of the Court when admitted to the bar then are deemed not to 6 do anything wrong no matter the lawyer did so and as such any complaint usually, at least to my 7 understanding is railroaded.

28
29 Lawyer X conduct and those like her might be compared to being like pavers in a paved road 30 where underneath is hiding a gigantic sink hole. The moment one start to replace some of the 31 pavers one loosen the structure and the gigantic sinkhole is then taking over. This is how I view 32 this issue with lawyer X and others like her is developing that it now will expose not just the 33 unlawful/illegal conduct of lawyer X, the police and others but that the entire legal system in real 34 terms is not a proper legal system at all. It has a cancerous growth within it like a sink hole. Like 35 a house of card the entire purported administration of justice turns out to be no more but merely 36 a form of gangster operating a KANGAROO COURT/STAR CHAMBER COURT system
37 purporting to be an IMPARTIAL administration of justice. That is my evaluation after spending 38 nearly 40 years at the bar tab le exposing often the rot within the administration of justice.
39

40 I quote below a publication of a recent media article that very much appears to underline as to 41 what I have set out below.

8 To me lawyer X is merely one deteriorating paver in a street where most pavers are deteriorating
9 and to replace just one or some more isn't going to do it. After all to loosen some pavers may 10 like a house of cards causes the collapse of the road and a gigantic sink hole then appears.

11 As I over the years have published in my books various incidents with the identity of judicial 12 officers concerned it is not something I need to fabricate as the judicial officers and lawyers 13 concern so far never even attempted to litigate against me for publishing the accounts.

15 This submission is extensive to some degree as to make clear that even if Lawyer X was to be 16 charged, convicted and perhaps imprisoned it still wouldn't solve the cancerous growth within 17 the legal system. It doesn't mean she should not be held legally accountable but that unless and 18 until the entire legal processes and so the administration of justice is held subject to a proper
19 investigation all this Royal Commission may appear to do in view of ordinary citizens is to do 20 another cover up by shielding other culprits.

11 Albeit I never read the order of any court regarding prohibiting publication of the identity of 12 Lawyer X, if there is any, to prohibit the identification of Informer 3838 also known as Lawyer
13 X I view that the courts are bound to provide judgments which are in principle to serve the 14 general community. Any prohibition which is to prevent identification of a particular person but 15 in the process places in jeopardy innocent persons, in this case lawyers I view is contrary to the 16 public interest where the particular person can change the identity at will to prevent knowledge 17 as to her whereabouts.

33 In my view to have allegedly a court order to prevent the identification of lawyer X but then 34 placing in jeopardy the credibility of other barristers is not at all to the credibility of the courts.
35 In my view any ban should be deemed unconstitutional and invalid as it denies a proper 36 identification of the person who was Lawyer X. Indeed, there may be some or many citizens who 37 might be able to reveal critical details about this person if they are made aware of the name of 38 Lawyer X. It then is the question of the courts approved to conceal the identity of lawyer X for 39 no other purpose but to seek to cover up for the involvement and the extent of the involvement of 40 the courts themselves and any politicians.

42 In particular where many a convicted criminal may have been subjected to the unlawful and I
43 view treasonous conduct of any lawyer then the courts must not pursue any method to cover up 44 matters. There must be a frank and open acknowledgement of the identity of Lawyer X as she 45 was at the times when I view treasonously acted against her being an Officer of the Court.
46 No matter what this Royal Commission might pursue and come up with in the end it will always 47 be under a stain that it was nothing more but a tool to hide the offender(s) against the interest of 48 the general community.

50 With reportedly more lawyers involved having been informers contrary to their duties and 51 obligations as an Officer of the Court then surely it makes no sense to prevent citizens to be 52 aware of the identities of all those lawyers involved.

1 Surely it is a gross injustice to allow people convicted in such circumstances to be kept in 2 imprisonment for a further time where their conviction is in question.
 3 It in my view is essential for the credibility of any Royal Commission that citizens can 4 make submissions knowing the identity of those informers. Not to reveal the identities of 5 those informers rather I view undermine the credibility of the Royal Commission. As such 6 the court should be petitioned to immediately set aside/withdraw any orders which may in 7 part or in whole prevent publication/naming the identity of any informer to which the 8 Royal Commission is required to investigate.

 24 Mr. BARTON.- Of course it will be argued that this Constitution will have been made by the Parliament of 25 the United Kingdom. That will be true in one sense, but not true in effect, because the provisions of this 27 are enforced, will all have been the work of Australians.

 28 END QUOTE
 29

30 Hansard 8-3-1898 Constitution Convention Debates

31 QUOTE
 32 Sir JOHN DOWNER.-Now it is coming out. The Constitution is made for the people and the states on 33 terms that are just to both.
 34 END QUOTE
 35

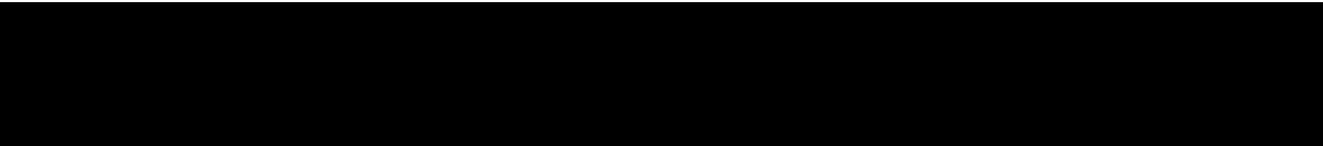

36 It is clear that the Government of the Day cannot provide any system that some Royal 37 Commission serve the very lawyer at possible harm of innocent lawyers nor that the courts can 38 do so where they must be and remain to be IMPARTIAL administration of justice.
 39

40 As the High Court of Australia itself appeared to conclude that lawyer X herself refused any 41 witness protection service and so placed herself and her children at risk.
 42

43 If the courts and the government is going to operate outside the legal principles embedded in the 44 constitution that a constitution is between the State and its people and not between the state and 45 just one person then we have no democratic system at all but a pretended democratic system.
 46

47 In my view any orders to prohibit the identification of lawyer X is contrary to PUBLIC 48 INTEREST and indeed harmful to many honest hardworking decent lawyers.
 49

50 As I set out below I question the validity of this Royal commission as to matters I have set out.
 51

22 For any Chief Commissioner of Police to as I understand it to claim that desperate times justify 23 desperate conduct (including unlawful conduct) in my view shows the extent how perverted the 24 system is. We lack democracy if a person like a Chief Commissioner of Police is willing to 25 justify treasonous and other unlawful conduct to suit his means.
26
27 Law enforcement can only exist if the law enforcement authorities and the administration of 28 justice are conducting matters within the framework of the law and not beyond.
29
30 As the Framers of the Constitution made clear:
31
32 Hansard 1-3-1898 Constitution Convention Debates
33 QUOTE
34 Mr. HIGGINS.-Suppose the sentry is asleep, or is in the swim with the other power?
35
36 Mr. GORDON.-There will be more than one sentry. In the case of a federal law, every member of a
37 state Parliament will be a sentry, and, every constituent of a state Parliament will be a sentry.
38 As regards a law passed by a state, every man in the Federal Parliament will be a sentry, and the whole
39 constituency behind the Federal Parliament will be a sentry.
41
42 It is therefore a PUBLIC INTEREST issue when a person, such as I am doing, seek to act as a 43 Sentry to hold those legally accountable who in my view violated constitutional and other legal 44 issues
45
46 I am a CONSTITUTIONALIST and (now retired) Professional Advocate spending decades in 47 courtrooms, including assisting/representing lawyers.

20 It is claimed, albeit I am unaware of the precise terms of any court order about Lawyer X
21 (Informant 3838) as to her true identity. In fact when I was trying to find out who really was the 22 person I did some limited research and then held it likely to be Sarah Garden-Wilson. Just then it
23 then was that my wife explained she still is a practicing lawyer. As such this utter and sheer 24 nonsense not to identify the alleged lawyer means that another lawyer might be wrongly 25 assumed to be the Lawyer X person.

26

27 We have a federal constitution which was in part build upon the provisions such as the first 14
28 Amendments of the USA constitution. Regrettably most lawyers/judges/politicians do not grasp 29 this as they either couldn't bother to research the true intentions of the Framers of the 30 Constitution (Commonwealth of Australia Constitution Act 1900 (UK)) or simply were unable 31 to understand/comprehend its application. Because the states were created within section 106 of 32 this constitution then any Royal Commission of a State is bound by the legal principles 33 embedded in this constitution.

35 And political freedom is one that is clearly enshrined in the constitution as was (finally) also 36 made known by Monis v The Queen, Droudis v The Queen, [2013] HCA 4, 27 February 2013,
37 S172/2012 & S179/2012

38

39 As such as this is a political issue where the Government of the Day via its law enforcement
40 agencies and others wrongly influenced the (IMPARTIAL) administration of justice then the 41 suspicion of the true dispense of justice by the courts is and remains in question, this in particular 42 where the courts continue to leave judgements in question on foot.

43 In my view the courts themselves should immediately set aside all questionable
44 judgments/orders, this even without the need for any person to appeal. If the courts fails to do so 45 than clearly it is not a proper administration of justice at all.

3 In my view Chief Commissioner of Police Mr Graham Ashton should stand aside if not 4 resign because I view his statements about why the police used Lawyer X was false and 5 misleading and somehow seems to try to justify the police themselves violating the 6 separation of powers and to place themselves above the rule of law.

8 The police and other law enforcement authorities should understand that their aim is not and 9 should not to try to score convictions but rather to present all relevant details before a competent 10 court of law and then let the court make the decision of the accused is innocent or guilty.

34 Was it Lawyer X who perhaps with the police set up the murder of Carl Williams in view that he 35 was suspecting if not knew she was a police informer against her own clients in violation to her
36 oath as an OFFICER OF THE Court?

38 Was she the person who gave confidential details to the media to ensure the Herald Sun
39 published details hours before Carl Williams was murdered?

41 It appears to me to be clear that the Victorian Police didn't want to stick to the agreement to pay
42 the purported ATO debt of George Williams and so it ensured that the payment was in a holding 43 account and well have Carl Williams murdered and get the monies back might have been a 44 solution.

46 It appears to me that so to say Lawyer X was as I understand it playing the field sleeping with 47 police, some clients she represented, charging them for representation while using details as a 48 police informer and then the general community is prohibited to know her identity supposing to 49 protect her and her children where she could simply use a different identity. What kind of 50 JUSTICE is this when people unbeknown to her and other treasonous lawyers are hiding behind 51 a screen and so their victims may never know they too were duped?

1
2 And lawyer X may have defrauded clients by billing them for consultations/representations
3 where her real motives were against her client(s).

4
5 HANSARD 8-2-1898 Constitution Convention Debates

6 QUOTE

7 Mr. HIGGINS.-I did not say that it took place under this clause, and the honorable member is quite right in 8 saying that it took place under the next clause; but I am trying to point out that laws would be valid if they had one motive, while they would be invalid if they had another motive.

11
12 Likewise I hold that if a lawyer attends to a client for ulterior purposes then strictly in the interest
13 of the client then the lawyer cannot charge the client for this and to do so I view constitutes 14 fraud.

15
16 Sorell v Smith (1925) Lord Dunedin in the House of Lords

17 QUOTE

18 In an action against a set person in combination, a conspiracy to injure, followed by actual 19 injury, will give good cause for action, and motive or instant where the act itself is not illegal is 20 of the essence of the conspiracy."

22
23 Hence, where a lawyer contrary to being an Officer of the Court acts as an informer against her 24 clients interest then I view this is in essence a conspiracy.

26 Hansard 22-4-1897 Constitution Convention Debates

27 QUOTE

28 Mr. BARTON: At first I thought it would be necessary to have some provision of this sort, but now I think 29 it is unnecessary. In the clause it is prescribed that [start page 1183] an elector "shall have only one vote"; as 30 to the Senate and as to the House of Representatives I intend to move, on the recommital of the clause, that 31 the matter shall be turned into a direct prohibition; that is, that "no elector shall vote more than once." A 32 breach will be a Statutory misdemeanor, and the offender can be punished, this being an Imperial Statute, in 33 the same way as he would be for a breach of any other Imperial Statute applying to the colonies, such as the 34 merchant shipping laws. Lest there should be any doubt in connection with the giving of a vote, when there is 35 a distinct law against it, there is a passage in Russell on "Crimes," which the legal members of the 36 Convention will be satisfied with. It is in the fifth edition, page 192:

37
38 Where an offence is not so at common law, but made an offence by Act of Parliament, an indictment
39 will lie where there is a substantive prohibitory clause in such Statute, though there be afterward a 40 particular provision and a particular remedy given. Thus, an unqualified person may be indicted for 41 acting as an attorney contrary to the 6 and 7 Vict., c. 73, a. 2, although sec. 35 and sec. 36 enact that in 42 case any person shall so act he shall be incapable of recovering his fees, and such offence shall be deemed a contempt of court, and punishable accordingly.

43 That is to say, although the Statute provides a distinct means of punishment, yet if by the disregard of the 44 prohibition a misdemeanor is committed, a court can convict the offender of that misdemeanor and may fine
45 or imprison him. The passage continues:

46 And it is stated as an established principle that when a new offence is created by an Act of Parliament 47 and a penalty is annexed to it by a separate and substantive clause, it is not necessary for the 48 prosecutor to sue for the penalty, but he may proceed on the prior clause on the ground of its being a 49 misdemeanor; and wherever a Statute forbids the doing of a thing, the doing of it wilfully, although 50 without any corrupt motive, is indictable.

51 Wherever the Statute, as I intend to ask the House to make it in this case, says that no elector shall vote 52 more than once, there is a distinct prohibition, and voting more than once wilfully will be a crime and 53 misdemeanor, and the courts will be able to punish by fine or imprisonment. They will have the distinct 54 power. There is in all of these colonies an electoral law, and power to alter it, until Parliament otherwise

1 provides, and if there are not distinct provisions for punishment for such offences, it is still in the power of
 2 the State law to subject the offenders to such punishment as it prescribes. But even if that were not done, the 3 case is distinctly met by the Statutory prohibition, which will be imposed by the form in which we propose to 4 put it, and, I think, my hon. friend will agree that his new clause will not be necessary.

5 Mr. ISAACS: I suppose you propose to put in words to make it a misdemeanor.

6 Mr. BARTON: If necessary; but where the statute expressly forbids it is a misdemeanor without further 7 words.

8 Dr. QUICK: Without any corrupt motive is it indictable?

9 Mr. BARTON: Although there may be no corruption in the doing of the act, if it is done intentionally it is 10 indictable.

11 Mr. HIGGINS: What words do you propose to put in?

12 Mr. BARTON: I propose to alter the words "each elector shall have only one vote" to "no elector 13 shall vote more than once," and that being a distinct statutory prohibition will meet the case.

24 Don't mention the law

25 QUOTE

26 The courts' rulings sometimes vary. Late in 2011, the High Court stopped the prosecution
 27 of the Solomon Islands attorney-general for alleged child sex offences because Australian 28 officials connived in his illegal deportation. A few weeks earlier, Victoria's Court of 29 Appeal permitted the state's trial judges to toss out evidence because of Victoria Police's 30 widespread practice of obtaining search warrants without actually swearing (that is, orally 31 declaring) the truth of the affidavits they presented to magistrates. But when Tony Mokbel 32 responded by seeking to withdraw his guilty pleas to drug offences because the evidence
 33 against him was founded on illegal warrants obtained by anti-drug and anti-gangland 34 taskforce officers, Victoria's parliament hurriedly stepped in. Within hours of a Supreme 35 Court ruling on Mokbel's application — which justice Simon Whelan said that he would 36 have rejected anyway — parliament rushed through retrospective legislation validating 37 over a decade's worth of invalid search warrants.

38 Attorney-general Robert Clark said parliament wasn't excusing the police's failings, only 39 remedying all their "grave" consequences. Victoria Police could scarcely have missed the 40 lesson: the courts or, failing them, parliament could be counted on to make good any and 41 all of their mistakes and misdeeds on the way to ending the gangland war. It was during 42 this period that Victoria Police first acknowledged that its handling of Lawyer X may have 43 been an error.

44 END QUOTE

45
 46 In my view laws are only valid if they are within constitutional provisions and not in violation of 47 it and the moment any person formally object to the application of any legal provision it is not

1 for the court to provide lip service to the legislation in challenge but to appropriately establish if 2 such legal provision under challenge is within constitutional limitations and not in violation of it.
 3 A clear example is the compulsory voting which after a 5 year litigation I successfully defeated,
 4 yet despite this judges are ordinary nevertheless enforcing compulsory voting. This may 5 underline how extensive throughout the Commonwealth those exercising their powers in the seat 6 of justice are ruling on their misconceptions without having any true understanding and 7 comprehension about the relevant constitutional provisions.

8
 9 In my view if the police used information obtained from an informer in violation to his/her
 10 obligations toward the accused then the police should have disclosed this to the court and failing 11 to do so the police themselves must be deemed to have concealed relevant details from the 12 court. It is therefore clear that the police and other laws enforcement authorities are manipulating 13 the legal processes not to pursue justice but to perhaps advance their own future positions.

 15 <https://www.abc.net.au/news/2019-02-07/informer-3838-not-only-lawyer-to-turn-victoria-police-informer/10789844>

17 Lawyers were used as informants last year, 18 prominent gangland barrister claims

19 QUOTE

20 The scandal embroiling the Victorian criminal justice system widened yesterday with revelations the newly formed royal commission into potentially tainted gangland convictions will broaden its scope after police disclosed "further informants who held obligations of confidentiality" — including other lawyers.

21 The state's Attorney-General, Jill Hennessy, refused to say whether they were still acting lawyers, but the ABC
 22 understands a further six lawyers were also police informers.

23 Ms Garde-Wilson said she had known for a while that informer 3838 — a gangland lawyer, also known as Lawyer X, 24 who covertly informed on her clients — was not the only one.

25 "We got information about 12 months ago that current lawyers were registered," Ms Garde-Wilson said.

26 "Given the High Court decision, wouldn't you deregister them as a matter of course?"

27 In a searing judgement released to the public in December last year, the High Court described the police's use of informer 28 3838 as "reprehensible conduct" which involved sanctioning "atrocious breaches of the sworn duty of every police 29 officer."

30 The court also stated it was greatly "hoped that it will never be repeated".

31 The High Court's criticism came after several investigations into the use of Lawyer X, including the Kellam inquiry, 32 which found negligence of a high order in the management of human source information by Victoria Police.

33 The Independent Broad-based Anti-Corruption Commission (IBAC) investigation was led by former Supreme Court
 34 judge Murray Kellam and noted Victoria Police failings when it came to the use of human sources had the potential to 35 have adversely affected the administration of justice in Victoria.

36 Victoria Police Chief Commissioner Graham Ashton has previously used Melbourne's gangland wars to justify the use of 37 informer 3838, saying "desperate times called for desperate measures".

38 However, the use of lawyers as human sources now appears to have been occurring for two decades, after it was also 39 revealed informer 3838 had been on the books since 1995, a decade earlier than first disclosed by police.

40 The number of criminal convictions that could be tainted is set to balloon as a result.

41 "This is the worst legal scandal in Australian history," Ms Garde-Wilson said.

42 "Hundreds of cases could have been compromised."

2

3 While I understood from comments of Mr Graham Ashton Chief commissioner of police that the 4 conduct to use lawyers as informers against their own clients was stopped years ago, this 5 appears to be an elaborate lie if Sarah Garden-Wilson is telling the truth.

6 In my view our political rights are to know the truth.

11 The revelation that has made certain Melbourne lawyers very nervous

13 By John Silvester

15 QUOTE

16 The experienced detective was surprised when a barrister rang out of the blue to say a judge 17 wanted to meet him for an off-the-record chat.

18 The judge and the cop had known each other for some time as they rose to prominence in their 19 respective professions, but this meeting was not about reminiscing about the old days. The judge 20 wanted to pass on a tip about an unsolved crime.

21 On Wednesday, the royal commission into police use of a lawyer as an informer known as 3838
22 was hit by two bombshells that exploded simultaneously. One was that she was first registered as 23 a police informer in 1995, not 2005 as initially claimed, and the second was that an undisclosed 24 number of lawyers had acted as informers.

25 This led to commissioner Mal Hyde resigning on Wednesday due to a perceived conflict of 26 interest because he was part of Victoria Police command in 1995 - although he had no dealings or 27 knowledge of 3838. It is also likely to blow out the December deadline set for the commission's 28 final report.

29 It is now entirely possible the commission will end up examining the ethics and practices of both 30 police and lawyers and it also explains why the use of information from 3838 wasn't seen by 31 detectives as breaking a perceived immovable line.

32 END QUOTE

33 I for one do not have an issue with a judge to report what the judge perceive to have been a 34 criminal offence where this was obtained as a citizen or having been stated in open court under 35 evidence. In my view while a judge is an Officer of the Court he doesn't have the same 36 confidentiality applicable as there is between a lawyer and a client. Hence a judge becoming 37 aware of a criminal offence having been committed, even if it relates to an unsolved criminal 38 case is well entitled and indeed obligated to report the details he/she became aware of. If the 39 judge however knowingly concealed information for a long time and merely reports matters for 40 ulterior purposes then I view the conduct is to some extend unlawful and may amount to a 41 conspiracy.

43 To use a hypothetical incident;

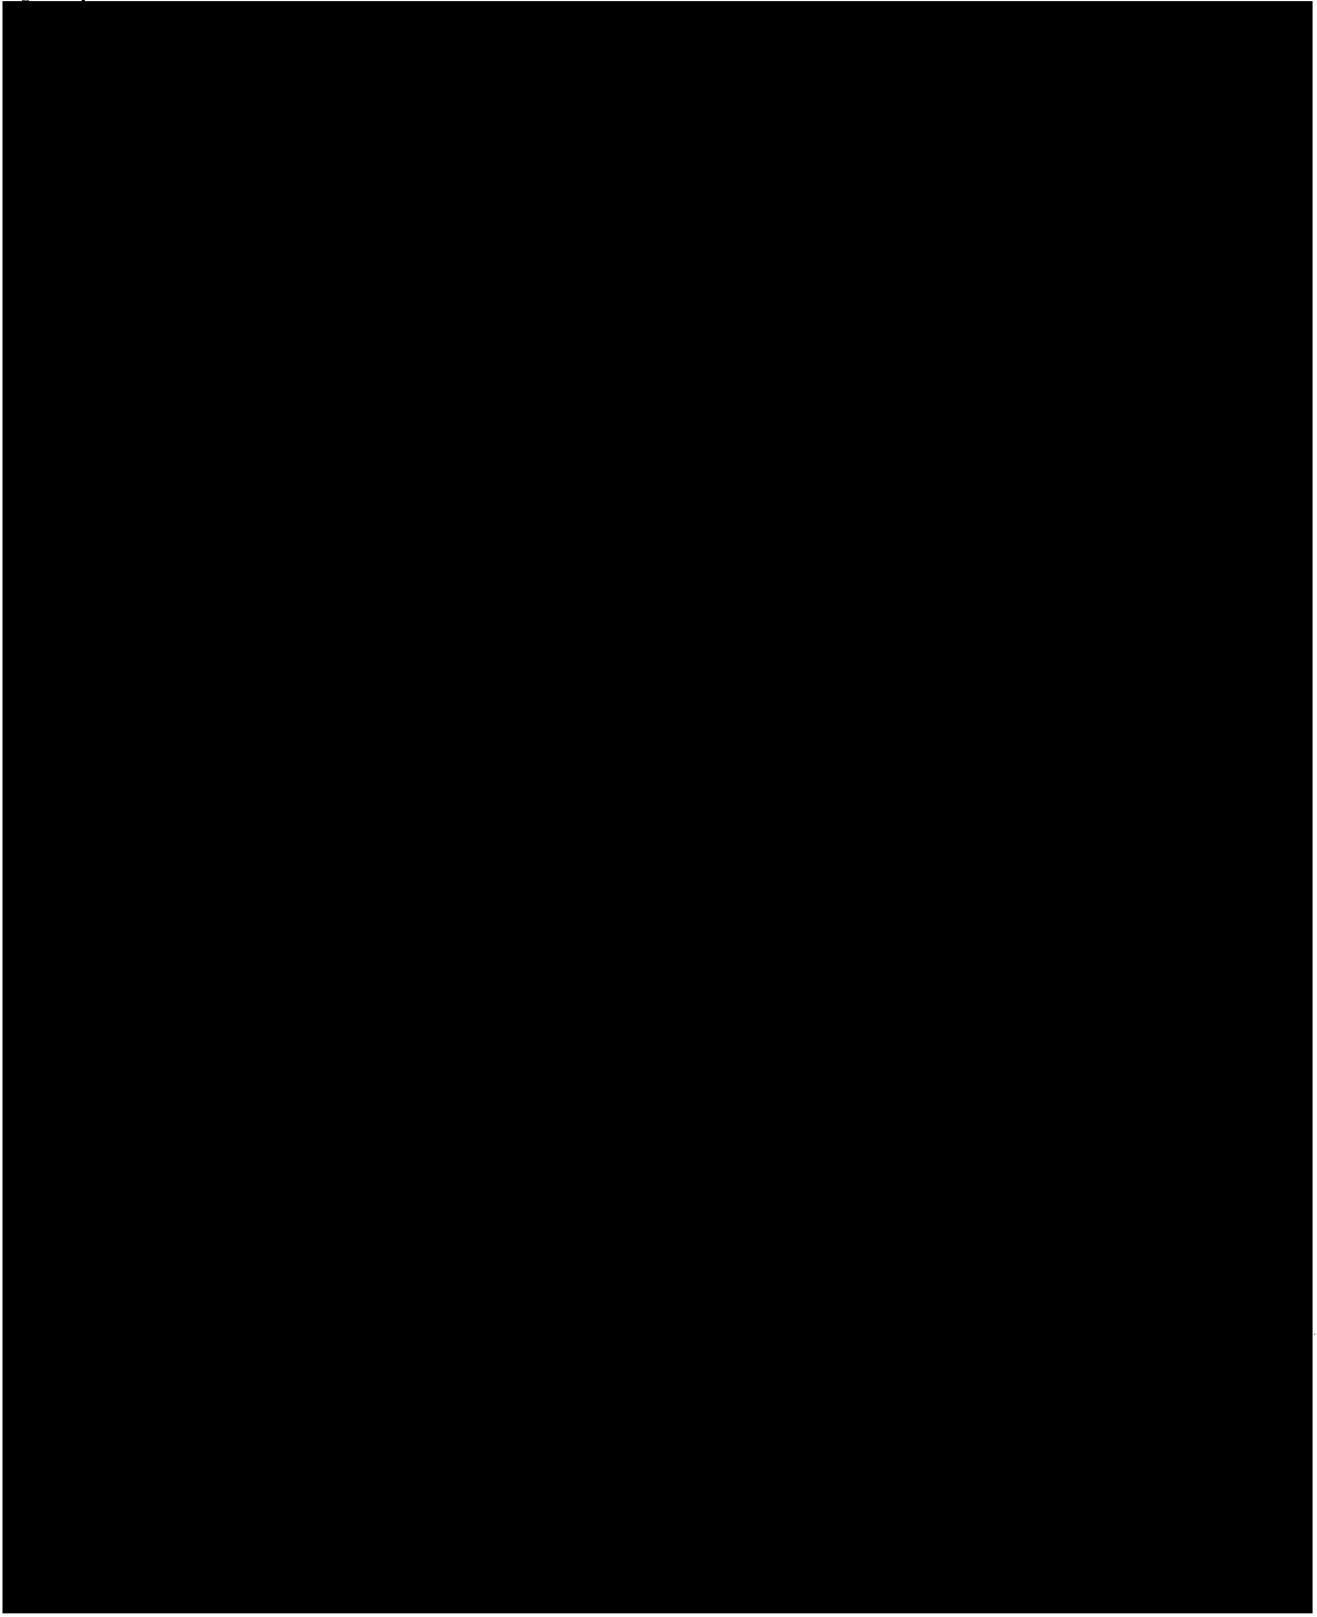

44 A police officer is standing on the footpath talking to a person when he notice that there is a motorist
45 unlawfully parking. He tells the person to whom he is in conversation: You see this motorist, he last week
46 defeated me in court and I will now pay him back to charge him for illegal parking. It is clear that the police 47 officer is not pursuing the motorist purely for violation of road regulations/laws but to do a pay back and so 48 misuses his powers for purposes not acceptable. Hence, the police officer MOTIVE is unlawful.

49

50 Likewise if the police pursues criminal charges by employing a person being it an Officer of the 51 Court or otherwise to violate the person's duties and obligations to score or seek to score a

1 conviction then I view the conviction cannot stand and must be set aside as well as the person
2 doing so and the official (police or otherwise) should be charged accordingly. The conviction 3 would be the product of a conspiracy and unlawful conduct and no fair minded person could 4 accept such a conviction to remain standing. If this means to release prisoners who were 5 convicted as such then so be it. One can only blame those who were involved in the scams.

11 In my view every person, including any commissioner in a Royal Commission and any lawyer 12 (that is if they are actually validly legal practitioners) should without hesitation direct that those 13 police officers/lawyers/judges who placed the administration of justice in disrepute by their 14 unlawful conduct to undermine the rights of accused persons should be charged accordingly
15 without undue delay. The administration of justice is no more unless and until if ever at all 16 wed simply rebuild the entire administration of justice and never again a court so to say 17 closes its eyes to violations of rules and legislation by prosecutors and others.

31 Australasian Convention),
32 QUOTE Mr. OCONNOR (New South Wales).-
33 Because, as has been said before, it is [start page 357] necessary not only that the administration of 34 justice should be pure and above suspicion, but that it should be beyond the possibility of suspicion;
37 It means that any court order that denies to acknowledge the true identity of the lawyer and/or 38 lawyers involved is unconstitutional as it denies any citizen who might have been affected by the 39 treasonous conduct of such lawyers to be aware if he/she was/is affected by this treasonous 40 conduct.
41 In my view this Royal Commission itself has its integrity in question where it would fail to 42 acknowledge the identities of any lawyer who were registered or otherwise informers in violation 43 to being an Officer of the Court.
45 It should be understood that when a citizen seeks legal advice/representation of a lawyer then 46 this citizen is entitled that such communication is in confidence. While no one could hold that a 47 lawyer could participated by silence into a planned criminal action such as murder, as then 48 lawyer-client privileges cannot be deemed to be maintained, it is another matter where a client 49 details any past events.
50

52 27 (17 June 1999)
53 QUOTE

1 *For constitutional purposes, they are a nullity. No doctrine of res judicata or issue
2 estoppel can prevail against the Constitution. Mr Gould is entitled to disregard the 3 orders made in Gould v Brown. No doubt, as Latham CJ said of invalid legislation, "he 4 will feel safer if he has a decision of a court in his favour". That is because those relying 5 on the earlier decision may seek to enforce it against Mr Gould.*

7
8 It is clear that the High Court of Australia itself acknowledged that a citizen can act in violation 9 to any court order which was/is unconstitutional.

11 We have and let us not ignore this issue, many persons in prison who may have upon legal 12 advice of their lawyers pleaded GUILTY where the lawyer did make such recommendations to 13 the client because the lawyer may have had some deal with police or other government 14 authorities.

15 No FAIR MINDED PERSON could possibly sanction this kind of conviction of a person.
16 In my view each and every court conviction involving any lawyer who was also an informer in 17 violation of being an Officer of the Court must be set aside, even if it was a conviction by a jury,
18 this because we may never know if the lawyer concerned had failed to do a proper cross-19 examination or failed to make proper recommendations or objections as to ensure a client was 20 convicted.

22 It should be clear that any lawyer who in violation of his/her oath as an Officer of the Court
23 became an informer then should be publicly named so that every citizen can then check if such a 24 lawyer was in/is involved in certain litigation.

25 If such a lawyer refuses any witness protection program then this in my view cannot override the 26 rights of the victims/possible victims. They are entitled to know the names of the lawyers 27 involved.

28
29 It is much like the crazy system that pedophiles may not be named where it could identify the 30 victims. However those who raped strangers might be named. This means that the so called 31 public listing of offenders will be limited to those who say raped adults and not children. It
32 simply doesn't make sense to me. As such any public register must be deemed inappropriate as it 33 would only deal with a selected criminal and not necessarily with those who are real threats to 34 children as those in favour of a public register are seeking to claim.

35
36 We now have a Royal Commission asking for submissions but failing to disclose the identity of 37 the lawyer(s) concerned to whom the Royal Commission seeks submissions. To me this 38 undermines the integrity of the Royal Commission. Let those treasonous lawyers change their 39 identity if they wish to do so but they should be publicly named as JUSTICE demand that any 40 possibly victim is entitled to pursue justice.

42 Our legal system provides for appeals but that is limited in numerous ways, for example if you 43 are a person of limited financial resources then you may not have the finances to fund any 44 appeal. And if you burden, if this is possible, to get a loan to engage a lawyer who then 45 unbeknown to the appellant is a treasonous lawyer who is acting against the appellant interest to 46 undermine the appeal then JUSTICE DOESN'T EXIST.

48 IT MUST BE CLEAR THAT MANY WHO HAD A FAILED APPEAL IN THE PAST
49 BEING REPRESENTED BY A LAWYER WHO WAS A POLICE INFORMER MAY 50 LIKELY HAVE LOST THEIR APPEALS BECAUSE THE LAWYER MAY HAVE 51 ACTED IN REALITY CONTRARY TO THE CLIENTS INTEREST.

1

2 As such any appeals that were dismissed or partly dismissed now also are in question.

3

4 Unless we can ensure that JUSTICE ALWAYS WILL PREVAIL we lack an IMPARTIAL
5 administration of justice!

19 It appears from media reports that Carl Williams himself made complaints. What happened to 20 those complaints and his subpoenas?

22 As the media reported that he found that there was no proper investigations in his complaints, 23 such as the legal Service commission and again this very much underlines what I have written 24 about in the past that it seeks to protects its own rather than enforce the Rule of law.

26 One has to question why was any lawyer being an police informer in violation of being a Officer
27 of the Court not subjected to having to explain/to show cause why their position as an Officer of 28 the Court should not be terminated?

26 Again, this is very relevant to this Royal Commission in view that many persons wrongly 27 convicted by involvement of their lawyers as informers in violation to them being Officers of the 28 Court could be wrongly denied to sue for damages.
30 I shall clarify that there is absolutely nothing wrong with an Officer of the Court being a witness
31 to a crime, even if the offender is his/her client to give evidence in regard of this event., albeit 32 where this were to cause a conflict of interest then the Officer of the Court should terminate 33 representation for this client.

26 I understand that Chief Commissioner of Police Mr Graham Ashton sought to excuse the use of 28 claimed) to put in my own words that desperate times requires desperate solutions. Well I do

29 not buy this. If we have a purported law enforcement that is willing to act unlawfully indeed
30 treasonous to the legal principles embedded in the constitution as well as in the relevant letters
31 Patent then we have no law enforcement at all. We merely have people using and misusing their 32 positions to likely advance their own careers and future disregarding what JUSTICE is about.

31
32 A point of issue was the Moti case. The Victorian Police claimed that because of the Moti case it 33 could no longer abide by the agreement with police informer Carl Williams.
34 As soon as I came across the correspondence of the Moti case I immediately checked what the 35 case was about and discovered that it was not at all what the Victorian Ethical Standards 36 Department had made it out to be.
37
38 The files (not even all) I like to provide to the Royal Commission is about 350MB (which also 39 include copies of my writings to the various persons) and hence I view it would be better to 40 provide this on CD.
41
42 It should be understood that I did the investigation without any financial arrangements being 43 made between me and Roberta Williams.
44
45 I heard about the Williams over the years but never had any personal contact with any of them
46 until about the middle of 2017 when requested to investigate matters.
47
48 I understand that Lawyer X made a gross error of judgment as to have a correspondence
49 published by the media in which she refers to IVF and also to the termination of her career as a 50 lawyer. It is in my view then very easy to establish who at the time the particular barrister was.
51

1 As the media reported "Carl Williams first to suspect his lawyer was an informer".
2 Roberta Williams also was recently quoted in the media that Lawyer X (informant 3838) also 3 known as EF had made known to Carl Williams to move away as he could be imprisoned.
4

5 This means that Lawyer X was involved before Carl Williams ended up in prison.
6

7 Hypothetically then Carl Williams suspecting Lawyer X was betraying him to Paul Dale and to 8 others including to the Victorian Police and others became a liability to Lawyer X. With as I
9 understand it having a cell mate as a client Lawyer X in my view may have been instrumental to 10 the leaking of information to the media also as to set up a possible killing. Obviously the police
11 officer who delivered the CD with the statements to the prison as I understand it concealing this 12 from the Victorian Ombudsman investigation may have been also instrumental to this. I 13 understand he had also other connections with prisoners held in the same prison.

14 The Victorian Police may have learned from lawyer X that her client Carl Williams had no
15 further information that could be useful (after all she may have obtained information from Carl
16 Williams and conveyed this herself to the Victorian Police, and hence the Victorian Police
17 Ethical Standards Department saw the Moti issue as a way to renege on the deal they had made 18 with Carl by twisting the true meaning of this Moti case to suit itself.
19

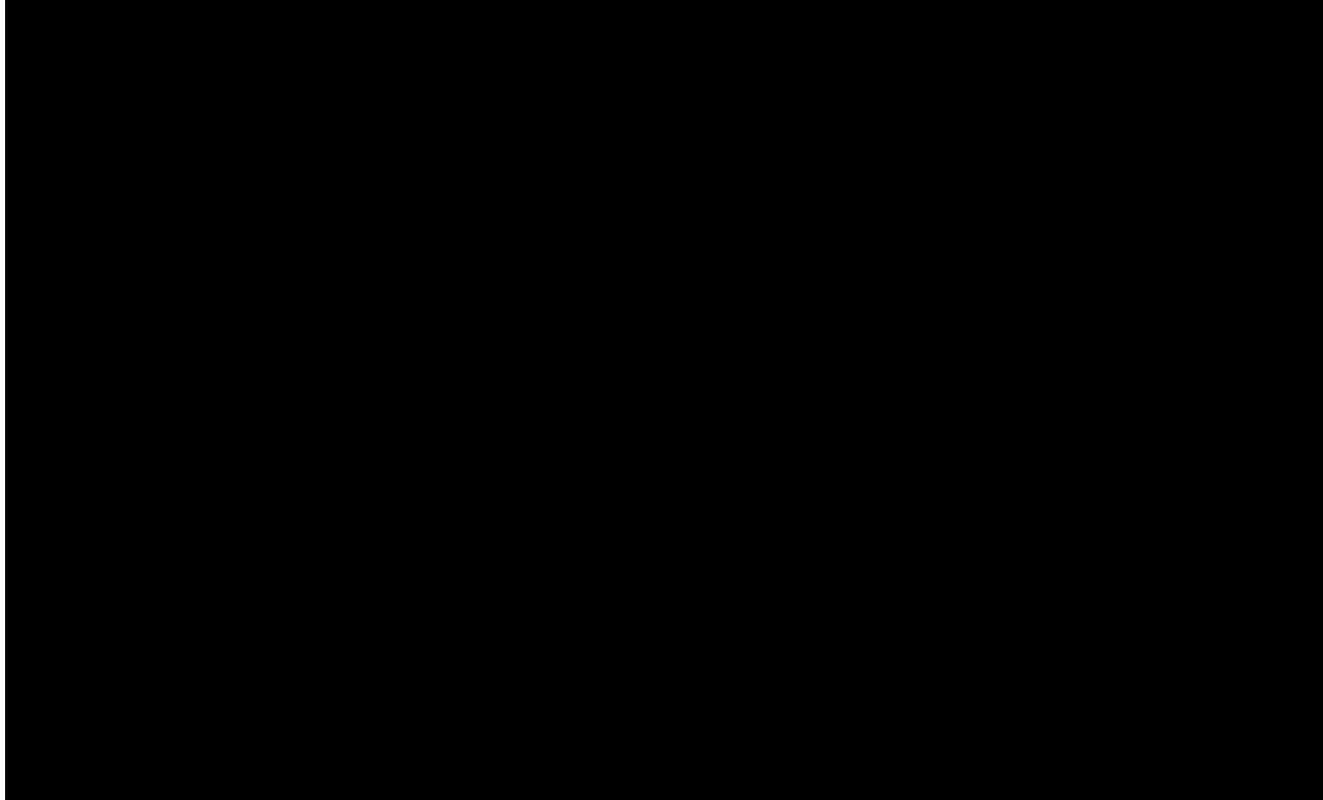

20 One has to question why the lawyers didn't bother to check the case themselves as I did!
21

22 Obviously where Lawyer X was a police informant against her own client, then I view this was 23 TO PERVERT THE COURSE OF JUSTICE.

24 In my experiences over the decades I found it not uncommon for lawyers so to say sell out their 25 clients. As some lawyers made clear they cannot speak up because then they may not get the 26 needed referrals of Legal Aid clients.

35 MOD ANNOUNCEMENT
36 Anyone speculating as to the name of EF will have their post removed and will get a time out.
37 I don't care if you're clever enough to work it out on your own, doxxing is against Reddit's rules, and I'm 38 not about to let this sub become a story on news.com.au because someone decided to demonstrate how clever 39 they were - or worse, named the wrong person.
40 Regardless of the practical efficacy of the pseudonym given to EF by the Courts, the fact of the matter is that 41 the name has been suppressed. For those who are members of the profession, you would do well to remember 42 your duty to the Court.
43 This is your first and only warning
44
45 A bunch of consequential judgments will flow from this - stay tuned!
46 Edit: Judgment below has now been published: <https://austlii.edu.au/cgi-bin/viewdoc/au/cases/vic/VSC/2017/350.html>
47
48 Among the most remarkable opening couple of paragraphs you'll ever read:

1 Early in February 2015, the Victorian Independent Broad-based Anti-corruption Commission provided to the 2 Chief Commissioner of Victoria Police ("AB"), and AB in turn provided to the Victorian Director of Public
 3 Prosecutions ("CD"), a copy of a report ("the IBAC Report") concerning the way in which Victoria Police
 4 had deployed EF, a police informer, in obtaining criminal convictions against Antonios ("Tony") Mokbel and 5 six of his criminal associates ("the Convicted Persons"). The Report concluded among other things that EF,
 6 while purporting to act as counsel for the Convicted Persons, provided information to Victoria Police that had
 7 the potential to undermine the Convicted Persons' defences to criminal charges of which they were later
 8 convicted and that EF also provided information to Victoria Police about other persons for whom EF had 9 acted as counsel and who later made statements against Mokbel and various of the other Convicted Persons.
 10 Following a review of the prosecutions of the Convicted Persons, CD concluded that he was under a duty as 11 Director of Public Prosecutions to disclose some of the information from the IBAC Report ("the 12 information") to the Convicted Persons.

13 In the months which followed, Victoria Police undertook an assessment of the risk to EF if CD were to 14 disclose the information to the Convicted Persons. The conclusion reached was that, if the information were 15 disclosed, the risk of death to EF would become "almost certain". On 10 June 2016, AB instituted
 16 proceedings in the Supreme Court of Victoria seeking declarations that the information that CD proposed to 17 disclose and other information in the IBAC Report was subject to public interest immunity and thus that CD
 18 is not permitted by law to make the proposed disclosures. On 11 November 2016, EF was added as a plaintiff
 19 to the proceeding. On 15 November 2016, EF instituted a separate proceeding in the Supreme Court of 20 Victoria seeking similar relief on the basis of an equitable obligation of confidence.

21 It gets more brutal:

22 EF's actions in purporting to act as counsel for the Convicted Persons while covertly informing against them
 23 were fundamental and appalling breaches of EF's obligations as counsel to her clients and of EF's duties to 24 the court. Likewise, Victoria Police were guilty of reprehensible conduct in knowingly encouraging EF to do 25 as she did and were involved in sanctioning atrocious breaches of the sworn duty of every police officer to 26 discharge all duties imposed on them faithfully and according to law without favour or affection, malice or 27 ill-will. As a result, the prosecution of each Convicted Person was corrupted in a manner which debased 28 fundamental premises of the criminal justice system.

29 ...

30 If EF chooses to expose herself to consequent risk by declining to enter into the witness protection program,
 31 she will be bound by the consequences. If she chooses to expose her children to similar risks, the State is 32 empowered to take action to protect them from harm.

33 END QUOTE

35 Again;

37 QUOTE

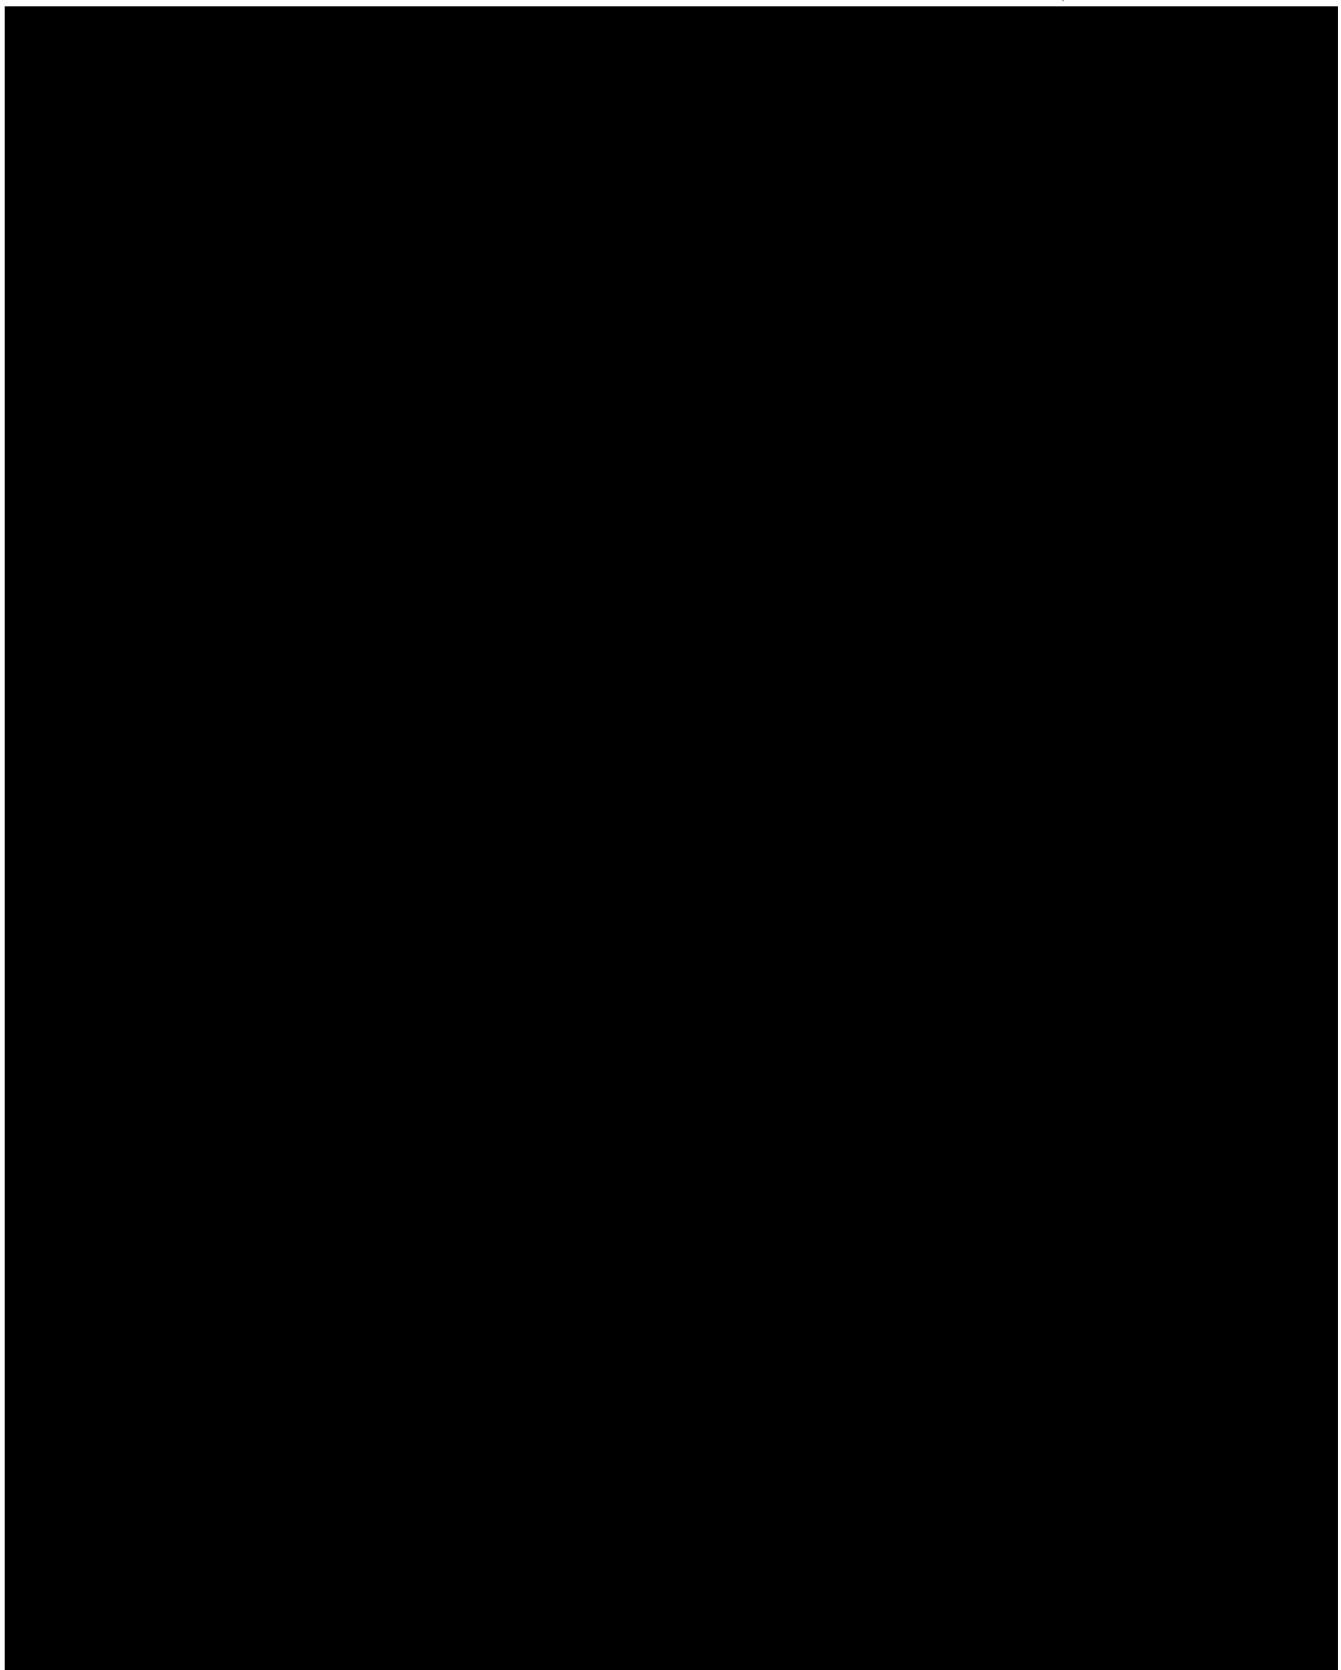

38 EF's actions in purporting to act as counsel for the Convicted Persons while covertly 39 informing against them were fundamental and appalling breaches of EF's obligations as 40 counsel to her clients and of EF's duties to the court.

41 END QUOTE

43 It therefore is obvious that if she was informing against her own client than more than likely her 44 manner of representation can be questioned. Did she for example avoid questioning witnesses for 45 the prosecution where it could assist her clients? Did she omit to put forwards submissions in 46 favour of her clients? Did she avoid making submissions in favour of her clients to ensure a 47 conviction could eventuate?

49 What I view we have is a lawyer who perverted the course of justice numerous times and as 50 such was not at all serving the public interest but rather her own as I view it twisted version of 51 justice.

- 1 Did she have contact with her clients and billed them for it when in reality her contact was to 2 obtain information for her to pass on to the Victorian Police? As such she might be deemed to 3 have defrauded her clients.

4 While it may be argued that Carl Williams was a criminal I do not accept this kind of argument
5 to justify any murder. To me when a person requested my assistance/representation then I must 6 act in the best interest of that person, albeit must avoid any conflict as a citizen in society. As 7 such when I was assisting a person in legal proceedings and I discovered he was concealing
8 evidence relevant to the issues before the court I made clear I had from onset stated I would not 9 undermine the courts ability to provide justice and so got out of the case altogether. In my view
10 if lawyer X had a moral issue to represent people she held were criminals then she should have 11 applied leave from the court to withdraw.

12 There is nothing wrong to be an informer to authorities as long as it doesn't undermine the 13 administration of justice and neither the obligations a person has towards a client. Albeit I held 14 persons I assisted/represented were not clients but referred to them as friends I still had my set of 15 morals.

13 QUOTE Matter No M732018 -Informer 3838- EF-58

14 As Ginnane J and the Court of Appeal held, there is a clear public interest in maintaining the anonymity of a 15 police informer, and so, where a question of disclosure of a police informer's identity arises before the trial of 16 an accused, and the Crown is not prepared to disclose the identity of the informer, as is sometimes the case,
17 the Crown may choose not to proceed with the prosecution or the trial may be stayed.

18 10 Here the situation is very different, if not unique, and it is greatly to be hoped that it will never be 19 repeated. EF's actions in purporting to act as counsel for the Convicted Persons while covertly informing 20 against them were fundamental and appalling breaches of EF's obligations as counsel to her clients and of 21 EF's duties to the court. Likewise, Victoria Police were guilty of reprehensible conduct in knowingly 22 encouraging EF to do as she did and were involved in sanctioning atrocious breaches of the sworn duty of 23 every police officer to discharge all duties imposed on them faithfully and according to law without favour or 24 affection, malice or ill-will². As a result, the prosecution of each Convicted Person was corrupted in a
25 manner which debased fundamental premises of the criminal justice system. It follows, as Ginnane J and the 26 Court of Appeal held, that the public interest favouring disclosure is compelling: the maintenance of the 27 integrity of the criminal justice system demands that the information be disclosed and that the propriety of 28 each Convicted Person's conviction be re-examined in light of the information. The public interest in 29 preserving EF's anonymity must be subordinated to the integrity of the criminal justice system.

32

33 QUOTE Matter No M732018 -Informer 3838- EF-58

34 It is further not without significance that Victoria Police may bear a large measure of responsibility for 35 putting EF in the position in which she now finds herself by encouraging her to inform against her clients as 36 she did. But large though those considerations may be, they do not detract from the conclusion that it is 37 essential in the public interest for the information to be disclosed.

38 END QUOTE Matter No M732018 -Informer 3838- EF-58

40 QUOTE Matter No M732018 -Informer 3838- EF-58

41 Generally speaking, it is of the utmost importance that assurances of anonymity of the kind that were given to 42 EF are honoured. If they were not, informers could not be protected and persons would be unwilling to 43 provide information to the police which may assist in the prosecution of offenders. That is why police 44 informer anonymity is ordinarily protected by public interest immunity. But where, as here, the agency of 45 police informer has been so abused as to corrupt the criminal justice system, there arises a greater public 46 interest in disclosure to which the public interest in informer anonymity must yield.

47 END QUOTE Matter No M732018 -Informer 3838- EF-58

49 This quotation clearly underlines that the failure by the Victorian Police to conceal Carl 50 Williams to be a police informer was what really likely was why he was so viciously murdered.
51

52 Because the media (Herald Sun) published the article in the morning of his murder then I view
53 the Herald Sun could be deemed complicit to the murder and should be questioned as to how it 54 obtained the information.

20 I do not know to what extend Lawyer X betray her clients but while she allegedly was a 21 registered police informer from about 2004 till 2009 it may have been that prior to that and 22 afterwards she may still had further involvement.

24 While Carl Williams is not deceased nevertheless justice should not be denied to him and if 25 lawyer X was a police informer against her client Carl Williams then any GUILTY plea I view 26 should be set aside.

27

47 It is totally irrelevant, at least to me, if Carl Williams and/or his father had a criminal past. Each 48 time either one were represented and were subject to litigation in court they were entitled to the 49 best kind of administration.

50 I always held the view and still does that the prosecutor is there to provide all relevant details to 51 the court and the defendant, meaning both adverse as well as to the benefit of the accused.

52 The Courts are not there to convict a person but to adjudicate upon evidence before it and if this 53 includes a conviction then so be it.

12 Again the 2-1-1901 Victorian Gazette published letters Patent refers to an IMPARTIAL 13 administration of justice. This means that you cannot have any lawyer who is acting as an 14 OFFICER OF THE COURT to then undermine DUE PROCESS such as a FAIR and 15 PROPER hearing of any accused. Where then a lawyer becomes a police informer against 16 her own client(s) then I view this is perverting the course of justice and conspiring to 17 pervert the course of justice. Those who then were involved as police officers, being it
18 directly and/or indirectly as a supervisory body must I view all be charged for perverting 19 the course of justice, conspiring to pervert the course of justice and for bringing the 20 administration of justice in disrepute, etc.

26 Informer 3838 had been used to try to elicit information from one of the officers under investigation, David 27 "Docket" Waters.

28 Then Deputy Commissioner Overland asked Briars investigator Ron Iddles to take a formal statement from 29 the informer, who was then living in Southeast Asia.

30 But Detective Iddles refused to allow the statement to be formally signed, fearing the use of the informer was 31 so unethical it could lead to a royal commission.

32 Informer 3838 was also deployed during Taskforce Petra, sent to covertly record a conversation with 33 Detective Dale who police believed was involved in the murders of the Hodsons in 2004.

39 QUOTE

40 The operation of the registered informant was managed by officers from Victoria Police's 41 human source unit, which was disbanded in 2013 amid concerns about serious misconduct.

42 But the overall investigations – code-named Taskforce Briars and Taskforce Petra – were 43 overseen by a “steering committee” that included Mr Ashton, who was then deputy 44 director of the Office of Police Integrity, current Victoria Police assistant commissioner
45 Luke Cornelius and then-deputy commissioner Simon Overland. Mr Overland is now chief 46 executive of the Whittlesea council.

47 Sources said there was “no way” Mr Ashton would not have known about the use of the 48 barrister given his senior position at the OPI and on the steering committee.

2
3 In my view the refusal of Ron Iddles to accept a signed statement surely ought to have 4 already been a warning to others not to use such unlawful kind of litigation against those 5 charged.
6 Surely the then committee overseeing this conduct of lawyer X should have questioned
7 why Ron Iddles refused to accept any sworn statement from lawyer X and also why Ron 8 Iddles did not file a formal complaint against such conduct, if that is if he didn't do so.
9

40 An IMPARTIAL administration of justice in my view means that any interference by 41 government and its authorities is a violation of separation of powers. It means that a lawyer
42 acting as an OFFICER OF THE COURT cannot be a police informer in regard of anything 43 that was in confidence conveyed to the lawyer.
44 Here we had Lawyer X making claims that she became a police informer to pursue justice
45 when in reality she was about a decade prior to that already a police informer. It means to 46 me that she and the police concealed this from the courts and ought to be charged with 47 perjury, etc.
48
49 One now also have to ask how much of the information Lawyer X provided to the police
50 might not just have been fabricated against her own clients? After all she proved not to be 51 trustworthy as an OFFICER OF THE COURT and hence I view that all convictions

1 involving Lawyer X and other lawyers who were police informers should all be 2 squashed/set aside.
3 The courts cannot stand by and have people incarcerated where the due process regarding 4 the administration of justice was compromised.

20 The fact that reportedly you spend millions of dollars to prevent matters to be exposed, and 21 that is taxpayers monies, I view that you can no longer be trusted and certainly not as Chief
22 Commissioner of Police and should forthwith resign. You may hold that to stand aside
23 might perhaps in the interim be a solution so that the Royal Commission can do its own 24 fact finding.

29

30 Let me make it very clear that I find there is nothing wrong with any person becoming a 31 police informer provided that person is not in conflict with his/her sworn duties and 32 obligations towards the person in regard of whom they are informing the police about. If 33 for example a person disclose to the lawyer to contemplate to commit a murder then the 34 lawyer cannot ignore this as to do so could implicate the lawyer in the commission of a 35 crime, if only by his/her silence.

44 So here we had the niece of Justice Gobbo charged about drug offences and remarkably 45 she is without conviction but not the other 2 persons. To me that seems to indicate the 46 Victorian Police all along was undermining the administration of justice to get her to 47 become a police informer knowing that she would become a lawyer. One has to question 48 how many more current and past lawyers were involved as a police informer against their 49 own clients.
50

51

52 How did all those lawyers appropriately represent their clients? I wonder if the transcripts might show that the relevant lawyer(s) at the time may have skipped certain line of cross-

1 examination of witnesses as to ensure the client would be convicted in some deal with the 2 police.

16 every advantage to the citizen against the state. Photograph: Alexander Kirch/Getty

18 It's a matter of pride for lawyers that they are free and able to work both sides of the street. In 19 particular the cab-rank rule for barristers dictates as much. One day as a prosecutor, next for an 20 accused; for the state and against it. And in the civil sphere there's much swapping of hats while 21 working for plaintiffs and alternatively for defendants.

22 Now we have the Victorian police informer and former barrister known variously as Lawyer X, 23 Informer 3838 or in judicial proceedings as EF, working "both sides of the street" to new and 24 previously unexplored levels. She was shopping her clients to the police who were prosecuting 25 them, notably when she acted as counsel for Melbourne crime figure Tony Mokbel and his 26 associates while simultaneously providing information to the police about her clients. About 27 eight years ago Victoria police paid her almost $2.9m in compensation for her troubles.

28 In November last year the high court lifted suppression orders that had kept the story under 29 wraps for years, while imposing other orders to protect the identity of EF.

30 As is often the case with suppression orders in an era of porous information, the story got out.
31 There's hardly a Melbourne lawyer, judge or convicted criminal who doesn't know the identity
32 of Informer 3838.

33 On 4 February, the Victorian court of appeal extended the suppression orders and to be sure
34 there'll be more of them emerging from the inquiry now under way, which has the benign name 35 of "royal commission into management of police informants".

36 More appropriately, it might be called royal commission into the corruption of the criminal 37 justice system. The terms of reference already have to be tweaked because Victoria police has 38 discovered that Informer 3838, aka Lawyer X, aka EF was informing from 1995, 10 years earlier 39 than first suspected.

40 Royal commissioner Malcolm Hyde fell on his sword because of a perceived conflict of interest,
41 having been a senior Victorian police officer during this earlier period. The commission soldiers
42 on with the former president of the Queensland court of appeal, Margaret McMurdo, at the helm.

43 It is now apparent that this perversion of justice runs deeper, wider and longer than was first 44 imagined. Other lawyers are said to be involved in dishing-up their clients to the police, and not

1 just in Victoria. How far it has spread is for now a matter of conjecture. Are any judges in on the 2 racket? Perish the thought.

3 This will continue to unravel painfully, damaging the so-called independence of the legal 4 profession, and betraying a criminal justice system supposedly designed to give every advantage
5 to the citizen against the state. The Victorian Bar has been quick to quarantine the fallout, saying
6 there is nothing to suggest other barristers are involved and that what has been uncovered so far 7 is “wholly aberrant”.

8 At its heart this is a story about secrets, and the struggle in the courts over the past four years to 9 keep the lid on them.

10 In 2014 Victoria’s independent broad-based anti corruption commission (IBAC) had former 11 supreme court judge Murray Kellam conduct an investigation into Victoria police’s 12 “management of human sources and in particular the issue of whether or not such management 13 has complied with appropriate ethical and legal obligations”. This was Operation Leven.

14 By February 2015, Kellam had completed the report examining how Lawyer X came to work as 15 defence counsel for Mokbel and six of his criminal associates in the drug trade, while 16 simultaneously working with the police to secure their convictions. This had the potential to 17 undermine the defences of the accused, quite apart from keeping relevant information from the 18 prosecutors.

19 In July 2012 Mokbel had been was sentenced in the Victorian supreme court to 30 years in 20 prison, to serve a minimum of 22 years.

21 The IBAC report was not made public, but it went to the Victorian police who then sent it to the 22 DPP. Ever since those two agencies have been engaged in lengthy and expensive litigation. The 23 DPP believes he had a duty to disclose the report’s findings to the convicted clients of Lawyer X,
24 while the police have strenuously opposed the release of the information, saying it would result 25 in the “almost certain” death of their informant.

26 The police commissioner started proceedings in the supreme court on 10 June 2016 seeking a 27 declaration that disclosure of the information was against the public interest – known to lawyers 28 as public interest immunity.

29 On 11 November 2016, Lawyer X was added as a plaintiff and she also started separate 30 proceedings on the grounds that she was owed an obligation of confidence.

31 The case was heard in secret with publication suppressed.

32 In June the following year, Justice Timothy Ginnane dismissed the proceedings, finding that 33 while there was a public interest in preserving the anonymity of EF’s identity, there was a 34 stronger public interest in favour to disclosure of the information in the anti-corruption 35 commission report.

36 Confidence in the criminal justice system demanded no less.

37 On 21 November 2017 the appeals were dismissed and in May last year the police and Lawyer X
38 went to the high court where in November their case was thrown out to the accompaniment of 39 scathing comments.

40 The lawyer’s breach of professional duty was “appalling”; the Victoria police were guilty of 41 “reprehensible conduct”; the prosecution outcomes had been “corrupted in a manner which 42 debased fundamental premises of the criminal justice system”.

1 It follows that the convictions be re-examined by the DPP. It was only then that the world at 2 large became aware of the deeds of Informer 3838 and the inevitable fallout followed in quick 3 order.

4 Throughout, the courts expressed concern for the informant's safety, yet she has refused to go
 5 into a witness-protection program with her children. Indeed, there are reports she has been seen
 6 around Melbourne and delivering her children to school. She is a member of a prominent 7 Victorian family and is widely known.

8 In a dark twist, the high court noted that she is anxious to avoid witness protection because she 9 believes the "Victoria police cannot be trusted to maintain confidentiality".

 12 The following article might also underline the sheer misuse and abuse of taxpayer's monies. The 13 police should in the first place not have engaged lawyers in violation to their position as an 14 Officer of the Court.

 16 One has to consider the harm inflicted to persons who were jeopardized in their representation by 17 Lawyer XC and others like her. It would be absurd to hold that lawyer X so called safety is more 18 important than the rights of those she harmed, as after all where she refused police protection
 19 then it is self-inflicted and should not be used by her or any other lawyer like her to deny proper 20 scrutiny and the reveals of her identity. After all there are ample of media reports already on the 21 internet about her suing the Victorian Police that were reported using her name as shown above.

32 Victoria Police has revealed it spent $4.52 million on a legal fight to keep the use of a criminal defence barrister as an informer
 33 during Melbourne's gangland war a secret due to fears she and her family "would be murdered".

34 Key points:

35 Victoria Police feared the lives of the lawyer and her family were at risk if identifying information was made public

36 A royal commission will investigate the arrangement, which the High Court described as "reprehensible conduct"

37 The police chief said he was aware of the use of the barrister but is "very confident" he has done nothing wrong

38 The arrangement will be the focus of a royal commission next year, which will investigate whether the scandal could taint the 39 convictions of senior gangland criminals such as Tony Mokbel, drug trafficker Rob Karam and convicted killer Faruk Orman.

40 On Monday, the High Court lifted suppression orders to reveal the barrister, who cannot be identified, represented Mokbel and 41 other underworld figures while informing against her clients between 2005 and 2009.

42 The High Court described police's use of the lawyer, known as Informer 3838 or Lawyer X, as "reprehensible conduct" which 43 involved sanctioning "atrocious breaches of the sworn duty of every police officer".

44 The court also found the defence lawyer had engaged in a "fundamental and appalling breach" of her obligations as a barrister.

45 Victoria's Director of Public Prosecutions wrote to 20 criminals after the suppression orders were lifted, to let them know their 46 convictions were potentially tainted by the arrangement.

1 In a statement today, Victoria Police confirmed it had spent a total of $4.52 million in legal costs in a bid to keep the arrangement
 2 secret.

3 "Our priority throughout has been the safety of the lawyer and her family 4 who we feared would be murdered if identifying information was released," 5 the statement said.

6 "We are duty bound to do all we can to keep people safe."

7 Defence lawyer David Galbally QC, who has several clients affected by the scandal, said the sum was "extraordinary".

8 "It is a lot of money ... for a government agency, a police department. It's extraordinary. I mean, the whole thing is 9 extraordinary," he said.

10 Chief Commissioner Graham Ashton said on Thursday that he was aware of the use of the barrister as an informer during his 11 time at the Office of Police Integrity or OPI.

12 But he said he had done nothing wrong and would not stand down from the top job.

13 "I am very confident in my own knowledge and role that I've done nothing wrong in this," he said.

16 Former homicide squad detective Ron Iddles said on Tuesday that up to 15 senior police officers turned a "blind eye" to the 17 consequences of using the barrister as an informant and he had raised concerns with a superintendent at the time.

18 "I said, 'you don't get this. I can tell you now, this will cause a royal commission'," Mr Iddles said.

19 "I just couldn't get that they didn't understand the ramifications of deploying, employing and registering a solicitor."

20 The Victorian Government is yet to appoint two royal commissioners to lead an investigation into the use of the lawyer-turned-informant.
 21

22 On Thursday Premier Daniel Andrews said both appointments would be made from interstate to create "appropriate distance"
 23 from the Victorian criminal justice system.

 25 within Section 106 SUBJECT TO THIS CONSTITUTION contained liberties equal at least to 26 that of the USA. Hence, our freedom of speech cannot be denied merely because some court
 27 may seek to hide its own failure to provide FAIR and PROPER trials, indeed it is of public
 28 importance and so in the interest of the public that matters are exposed. You cannot have that a 29 informant is in her own capacity pursing publications and is reported about in the media but 30 somehow a Royal Commission cannot reveal the identity and so thwart the ability of citizens to 31 be aware as to the true identities of those officers of the Court who were registered informers or 32 otherwise betraying their oath and their clients. In my view the Royal 33 Commission should request the court to set aside any court orders which would undermine the 34 purpose of the Royal Commission and the ability of citizens to be aware what precisely is being 35 investigated.

TO CONFIDENTIAL MATTERS HAVE NOT BEEN REVEALED.

13 Commissioner,

14 Further to my 18-2-2019 submission I desire to state the following:

15 Any lawyer who is a member of the Bar and acting as a legal practitioner must act within the 16 applicable rules being an Officer of the Court. Hence, failing to do so not only is a disgrace
17 being a legal practitioner but undermines the credibility of the court.18 If therefore Lawyer X/Informer 3838/EF and any other lawyer are registered with the High Court
19 of Australia bar (as to act before the High Court of Australia as a legal practitioner) then I view
20 the High Court of Australia cannot protect such a lawyer from any wrongdoing in violation to an 21 oath to be a member of the Bar. As such, I view that where any lawyer were to seek the High 22 Court of Australia to overturn the orders of the Supreme Court of Victoria to set aside any non-
23 disclosure order of the court then the High Court of Australia is bound to protects its own
24 credibility to deny any such application/appeal.25 It should be understood that any legal practitioner who is/was part of a criminal conspiracy, eve
26 n by silence, then no longer can rely upon the lawyer-client confidentiality. Likewise, I view that 27 any legal practitioner who acts or acted in a conspiracy with the Victorian Police likewise can no
28 longer obtain the protection of the courts to have and/or conceal the lawyer(s) identity. To argue 29 that somehow the lawyer who placed the courts in disrepute by such criminal conduct can pursue 30 the protection of the courts for the sake say of any children in the lawyers care would be 31 discriminatory to others. The authorities can always remove the children from the lawyer's care
32 where she by her own conduct placed them or may have placed them in harm's way or likely did
33 so.34 It would in my view be idiotic that the courts would place the alleged self -interest of the lawyer
35 above that of the credibility of the court. It is like the lawyer making clear I didn't care less about 36 upholding the credibility of the court and was willing to place the court in disrepute and cause
37 gross injustices to my clients but for my sake that is all irrelevant even so I placed my own
38 children at possible danger.39 In my view the lawyer(s) concerned, the Victorian Police officers, the Prosecutor(s), etc, who 40 were all involved committed criminal offences and by this undermined the democratic system we 41 all are entitled upon. They all should be charged and held legally accountable as not to do so
42 would mean that those wielding power are above the rule of law.43 It is for this also that as I understood it the then Attorney-General Robert Hulls wife was a 44 prosecutor and concealed relevant evidence from the court to score a conviction of a person in 45 regarding rape while aware that the man was innocent, then she should have been held legally

1 accountable for perverting the course of justice and placing the court in disrepute as an Officer of 2 the Court.

3 Lawyers who appear at the bar table must conduct themselves as model litigants and where they 4 fail to do so the court cannot tolerate this.

5 The courts by the 2-1-1901 published Letters Patent are bound to be and be seen as impartial 6 administration of justice and any legal practitioner who defies this cannot be shielded.

8 Hansard 1-2-1898 Constitution Convention Debates (Official Record of the Debates of the National 9 Australasian Convention),

10 QUOTE Mr. OCONNOR (New South Wales).-

11 Because, as has been said before, it is [start page 357] necessary not only that the administration of 12 justice should be pure and above suspicion, but that it should be beyond the possibility of suspicion;

15 In my view if the High Court of Australia were to grant any stay of the Supreme Court of 16 Victoria order to lift the non-disclosure order would or could be seen that it too has become a so 17 called STAR CHAMBER COURT where there no longer is any impartial administration of 18 justice and the court no longer seeks to ensure that the credibility of the courts are upheld.

19 Indeed, in my view each and every judge who presided over a case where it is shown that a legal 20 practitioner acted in violation of his/her obligations as an Officer of the Court should have there 21 and then have charged the legal practitioner or in the alternative have requested the relevant 22 authorities to investigate the conduct of the legal practitioner.

23 This clearly has so far not eventuated and by this the relevant judges themselves placed the 24 integrity of the administration of justice in disrepute.

25 In regard of EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 she became an informer long before she had children,
 26 at least as I understand it, and as such if there was any danger to children then it is clearly self-
 27 inflicted. It is not to mean the safety and/or wellbeing of the children can be ignored but that the 28 authorities must simply place them in security while EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 is so to say
 29 pay the price for her unlawful conduct. Not to do so means that there is a sexual discrimination
 30 applied to the courts that a male lawyer can be punished but a female lawyer can hide to have a 31 child and use it as some sort of a shield to avoid being held legally accountable.

32 We have this ongoing drive about women's equality but none of it seems to relate to women 33 having a similar system of punishment applied to them as is applied to male offenders in similar 34 circumstances, as I have written about to expose this for decades.

35 We must not ignore that what appears to me over a period of about 2 decades EF/Lawyer
 36 X/Informer 3838 undermined the credibility of the administration of justice and disregarded time 37 and time again the gross injustice she inflicted upon her client and now somehow expect the 38 courts to hide her identity merely because she has children? She knew what she was doing and 39 did so time and time again and gave to my understanding a false excuse alleging to relate to 40 Tony Mokbel in 2005 where later it turned out she had been an informer even as a law student in 41 1995. In my view this was not just a once of error but a continuous deliberate conduct. She so to 42 say played judge and jury over the faith of her clients and should be held legally accountable for 43 this, and so those who conspired to this conduct with her. The concealment of her identity might 44 prevent many to be aware how she may have misled them also and in my no impartial 45 administration of justice can permit this to be left as such. The courts are bound to ensure that 46 any person wronged are provided their entitlement to know which lawyer(s) was involved.

50 MAY JUSTICE ALWAYS PREVAIL®

51 (Our name is our motto!)

1 Likewise I view this is DOUBLE STANDARDS where I understand neither [REDACTED] or any 2 other judge held the Victorian Police officers involved in the EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 and 3 other legal practitioners scam to undermine the administration of justice legally accountable.
 4 Here we have as I understand it [REDACTED] going after the media for making certain reports in their 5 publications regarding Pell and yet for all those years [REDACTED] and other judges like him appear
 6 to me to have done nothing to deal with members of the Victorian Police who enlisted legal 7 practitioners as informers against their own clients. And the fact that there was ample of 8 litigation before the Supreme Court of Victoria about EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 being an 9 informer against her own clients then I view this was a scandalous ignorance as each judge who 10 was dealing with this case as to conceal the identity of EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 should in 11 my view have been obligated to immediately charge EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 for 12 undermining the credibility of the administration of justice and placing it in disrepute, and for so 13 far this was concealed in previous hearings against any of her clients then for CONTEMPT OF 14 COURT and CONTEMPT IN THE FACE OF THE COURT, etc.

15 What about fraudulently charging a client for attendance where she might have attended for no
 16 other purpose but fact finding as an informer? After all I understand Carl Williams raised this 17 issue in his writings that she appeared to attend for trying to get information. This I view likely 18 also may have resulted that the Victorian Police made the deal with Carl Williams with the 19 intend to later cancel it, even so Carl Williams pleaded GUILTY as part of the deal, which 20 conviction I view should be set aside. It was the Victorian Police who requested the ATO to 21 place the monies in a holding account, and to me this indicates that the Victorian Police were 22 milking Carl Williams for information directly as an informer but then were using EF/Lawyer
 23 X/Informer 3838 to verify details and when the Victorian Police held , so I assume, that Carl 24 Williams had no more use to it then so to say Carl Williams fate was sealed and his subsequent 25 murder I view was part of getting rid of Carl Williams in view that he was so to say sounding
 26 the alarm bells that EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 appeared to be an informer. Hence the leaking
 27 of confidential details to the media which was published the very day before the murder 28 eventuated. If therefore any proceedings were held in the County Court of Victoria involving 29 EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 and/or any other legal practitioner turned informer against his/her
 30 own client then why has Kidd CJ not pursued them rigorously to be held legally accountable
 31 with those of the Victorian Police and others who participated in this fraud upon the courts and 32 the relevant clients? To me this is applying DOUBLE STANDARDS which I view itself places 33 the administration of justice in disrepute. Legal practitioners who informed against their 34 clients in such manner such as EF/Lawyer X/Informer 3838 and others like her never can 35 nor should have the protection of the courts to conceal their identity. The legal doctrine of 36 "ex turpi causa non oritur action" denies any remedy to a litigant (including a prosecutor) who 37 does not come to court with clean hands. (If your own action is very unlawful and very unethical, 38 if you come to court with "Dirty Hands" best not to question others legality, morality, and 39 ethics!)

13 desire to state the following:14 For decades I have been concerned as to the usage of counsellors in legal proceedings.
15 Conducting since 1982 a special lifeline under the motto MAY JUSTICE ALWAYS 16 PREVAIL® it has not been uncommon to me that persons complained that counselors (social 17 workers, etc) were making false/fabricated claims in court as being experts witnesses. Often this 18 could means losing a case upon such expert witness evidence.19 This Royal Commission is dealing with legal practitioners who are police informers against their 20 own clients and I did in my last supplement 2 of 28-2-2019 refer to [REDACTED] about CONTEMPT
21 OF COURT issues, and regrettably far too often lawyers who are so to say placing the 22 administration of justice in disrepute are not held accountable for this.

34 Likewise with the concealment of the identity of EF/Lawyer X/Informant 3838 somehow 35 publication on the internet is unrestricted as if people wouldn't know about how to obtain
36 information via the internet. Obviously one could question on constitutional grounds how a 37 State court not exercising federal jurisdiction possibly can prevent publication in any area within 38 the Commonwealth of Australia beyond the jurisdiction of the State of Victoria. And as I found
39 former newspapers articles published ion the internet still reveal the identity of EF/Lawyer
40 X/Informant 3838. This makes it an absurdity to have a ban on publication which may be argued 41 to protect certain persons or even an accused to be able to obtain a FAIR and PROPER trial but 42 may in this day of age in technology be out of date. And not to hold lairs of Officers of the Court 43 legally accountable means that when a publication is permitted a person who might have relevant
44 information may be prevented to present them within a time frame permitted. Failing to legally 45 deal with Officers of the Court who are undermining the administration of justice such as 46 EF/Lawyer X/Informant 3838 and the police officers involved will be in itself to place the 47 administration of justice in disrepute.

42

43 Where we now apply some STAR CHAMBER COURT system then anarchy can only result, 44 this because those in power will manipulate the system not against those who might have 45 offended but against anyone who might be for whatever reason in their way.

46

47 As the article of Sunday 3-30-2019 indicated Nicola Gobbo was telling one person to remain
48 silent while making a deal with the police with another person who was also arrested. She as I
49 understood it violated in numerous ways her duties and obligations as an Officer of the Court
50 and yet so far I gain the impression that the Victorian Police and others are claiming no laws 51 were broken and they committed no crimes.

1 To me the sanctity of the constitutional rights to have an impartial administration of justice, also 2 enshrined in our Letters Patent cannot but deemed to be violated if any Government official 3 and/or Officer of the Court violates this.

4
5 Any decision that was the product of denial of an impartial administration of justice litigation
6 must be deemed without legal force. While the Court at the time may have been perceived as a
7 competent court of justice by hindsight it was as I view it no more but a STAR CHAMBER 8 COURT and hence the convictions cannot stand for this.
9

10 A judicial officer may have believed to preside over an impartial administration of justice (court)
11 hearing but well where the Officer of the Court undermined this then this only underlines the 12 weakness of the court/judiciary system to fail to avoid this.
13

14 I as a citizen had a right that Tony Mokbel and others were provided a FAIR and PROPER 15 hearing and this clearly appears not to have eventuated. How can I trust anyone associated with 16 the judiciary to do better when they are not willing to accept that those wrongful obtained 17 convictions should be held a nullity?
18

19 How on earth could the prosecutor in each case have been allowed to conceal from the court this 20 treasonous conduct is beyond me. Those Prosecutors as Officers of the Court should be 21 prosecuted for violating their duties and obligations as Officers of the Court.

11 TO CONFIDENTIAL MATTERS HAVE NOT BEEN REVEALED.

12 Commissioner,

13 further to my 18-2-2019 submission and 26-2-2019 and 28-2-2019, 1-3-2019, 4-3-14 2019 supplements I desire to state the following:
15

28 There are many legal practitioners to whom it is an honour to be a Officer of the Court and 29 during their working life pursues to act accordingly to their duties and obligations. However if 30 they try to criticize a wrongdoer who is an Officer of the Court then they risk that they can have 31 their practicing license suspended, even permanently. As a Professional Advocate I had no such 32 dangers and always was able to speak out. Hence many legal practitioners (Officers of the 33 Court), albeit of the record, expressed to me they valued my conduct to expose the rot.

34 The legal doctrine of "ex turpi causa non oritur action" denies any remedy to a litigant 35 (including a prosecutor) who does not come to court with clean hands.

36 If your own action is very unlawful and very unethical, if you come to court with "Dirty Hands"
37 best not to question others legality, morality, and ethics!

38 Hence, I view that when Nicola Gobbo appeared before the Supreme Court of Victoria to sue for 39 millions of damages the trial judge there and then becoming aware of the unlawful 40 collaboration/conspiracy between the Victorian Police and Nicola Gobbo should have there and 41 then exercised his legal duties to have them all charges with CONTEMPT OF COURT,

1 conspiracy to pervert the course of justice, perverting the course of justice, bring the 2 administration of justice in disrepute, etc.

3 That is the duty and obligation of any judicial officer as an Officer of the Court to ensure that 4 any criminal conduct is appropriately attended to. Further, the trial judge then in my view had an 5 obligation to immediately ensure that the victims of this collusion/conspiracy had their 6 convictions set aside. Instead we had that former Chief Commissioner Crombie did his 7 investigation but nothing was done to immediately provide justice for the victims. Neither did
 8 the judges of the appeal court bother to take appropriate steps and so years went by while those I 9 view wrongly convicted nevertheless were kept in imprisonment.

10 While the High Court of Australia judges were critical they too each being an Officer of the 11 Court failed to ensure appropriate charges were immediately laid. In the process of all those 12 years the victims suffered horrendously. Carl Williams was viciously murdered.

13 Other Officers of the Court joined in to become police informers against their own clients and 14 this because the Supreme Court of Victoria judges failed to act to take appropriately steps to stop 15 this rot, like a cancer.

17 Here we have Victorian Police supposing to enforce the rule of law placing itself above the rule
 18 of law and not a single judge took action to stop this. Each of them therefore I view should be 19 charged for placing the administration of justice in disrepute.

21 It also means that if you as a royal commissioner have persons appearing before you who you are 22 aware of have been involved in this kind of conduct to pervert the course of justice then as an 23 Officer of the Court you are bound to ensure that appropriate steps are taken to have them 24 charged. Failing to do so in my view means you are yourself failing your duties as an Officer of 25 the Court.

26 While you may argue that you are a Queensland Officer of the Court, this is no excuse because 27 the High Court of Australia as I understand it made clear that a legal practitioner in one state can 28 likewise conduct matters in any other state. Well, then your duties and obligations as an Officer 29 of the Court are likewise applicable in other states, even if being a royal commissioner you are 30 limited. This as the separation of powers cannot mean that the Government of the Day can 31 somehow undermine/interfere with your duties and obligations as an Officer of the Court.

32 In my view it would be utter and sheer nonsense that the victims are still being kept in 33 imprisonment while those who colluded/conspired are walking free as if they committed no 34 crimes and have pro-motions as result of their unlawful conduct and/or have a massive financial 35 benefit.

46 We now have that the victims of Nicola Gobb and the Victorian Police and other officers of the 47 Court like her now are still denied justice while the culprits somehow are still protected.

49 I view that any decent legal practitioner being an Officer of the Court should demand that 50 immediately appropriate action is taken against the offenders.

1 The Imperial Act Interpretation Act 1982 (Vic) clearly outlaw the STAR CHAMBER COURT
2 and yet this is really that was and still is applied.

3
4 In my view Nicola Gobbo lied as to that Tony Mokbel was why she became an informer as I
5 understand she was already an informer in 1995.

6
7 Likewise I view Chief Commissioner Graham Ashton lied as to claim Nicola Gobbo became an 8 informer in 2005 relating to her dealings with Tony Mokbel.

9
10 I have always made clear that I am against drug dealers, etc, but I have also always made clear 11 that we can never deny them a FAIR and PROPER trial and provide NATURAL JUSTICE.

13 The fact that the Victoria Police appear to me to have a modus operandi to get Officers of the 14 Court betraying their clients as well as acting in violation of being an OFFICER OF THE 15 COURT and the Prosecutors went along with this I view is a very serious issue.

17 This has not been a once of incident but a repeated conduct not only with Nicola Gobbo but also 18 with other Officers of the Court where the Victorian Police disregarded the rule of law and so 19 undermined our democratic system.

20
21 Even Counsel assisting the Royal Commissioner has an obligation as an Officer of the Court to 22 ensure appropriate charges are laid against those who offended.

35 We appear to have had at least a dozen or more judges who were dealing with Nicola Gobbo and 36 aware of her unlawful conduct and yet none of them actually took appropriate steps against her 37 and the relevant police officers.

38 How on earth can any FAIR MINIDED PERSON trust the administration of justice when the 39 judges themselves are flaunting their obligations as Officers of the Court?

40
41 This Royal Commission may take a year or more since its announcement to present a final report 42 but it would be a grave injustice if those who were wrongly convicted in the meantime are 43 denied justice. As I understand you made yourself clear that you are not to deal with the 44 convictions themselves and that is correct but you as an Officer of the Court you must not delay 45 any action against those who offended against their victims' rights and for undermining the 46 administration of justice.

1 Commonwealth v Schorel-Hlavka).Indeed the County Court of Victoria in its orders made this
 2 very clear on 19-7-2006 to uphold both appeals I had filed.

3 Why then are they not charged for perverting the course of justice and harming the child
 4 Dhakota Williams? Moreover, if as appears to me Nicola Gobbo was involved to have George
 5 Williams pleading guilty then I view this decision should have been set aside long ago and this 6 would also mean that the ATO case has no legal standing for this also.
 7

8 While you may restrict yourself to only deal with how police deals with informers and so ignore
 9 the harm such as caused upon Dhakota Williams that flowed from it, this to me would mean
 10 really that JUSTICE CONTINUES TO BE DENIED. One cannot separate the end result from 11 the Victorian Police as I view it criminal conduct to undermine the administration of justice.
 12

13 Citizens of the state of Victoria cannot accept that those persons who were convicted due to 14 having lawyers who violated their obligations/duties as an Officer of the Court are rightly
 15 convicted. In my view any court who nevertheless allows those convictions to remain on foot 16 rather than to immediately set aside each and every so to say questionable/contaminated 17 conviction only becomes part of placing the administration of justice in disrepute.

19 Let the prosecutor consider if without any contaminated evidence there is a case against any 20 person and then follow up with appropriate charges to pursue the courts to deal with those 21 accused in a FAIR and PROPER hearing, but let us never accept that any STAR CHAMBER
COURT kind of system can be part of our administration of justice. To allow for this means that 23 soon many innocent people will end up convicted because those involved to uphold the law may 24 simply abuse the system for their own benefits.
